BOSTON POLICE SCOUR WOODS FOR BOY

NEW POSTCARD CLEW

JEALOUS, KILLS WIFE, CHILD AND HIMSELF WITH DRUG

WORCESTER, Nov. 20.—Fired by jealousy, John Wood, employed in a Worcester square grocery, and well known among the merchants of this city, killed his wife, Bessie, their very month old son, Raymond, and then committed suicide, early today by the use of chloroform.

Wood left a note telling the time he contemplated the double murder and took his own life. The wife and child were killed by saturating sponges with chloroform and placing them over the mouths of the sleeping victims.

The man then prepared another sponge, heavy with chloroform, placing it on his own face, twisting his hands in a cord behind his back so his work would prove successful.

The wife was killed at midnight. The child was murdered at 2:15 a. m. Wood killed himself at 3 a. m.

Letter Tells of Deed.

The tragedy was discovered by Walter Nichols, who boarded with the family, and Jennie Young, a maid. The young woman, accustomed to the early rising of Wood, and not seeing him about the house, knocked at his door. She received no response and called Nichols.

They looked around and found the letter left by Wood. On the outside of the folded sheet was this sentence:

"I take my life about 3 o'clock."

It was apparent from the letter that it

HYDE ON TRIAL FOR BRIBERY AFTER YEAR AND A HALF

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—A year and a half after being indicted, Charles H. Hyde, former city chamberlain, was placed on trial today on the charge of bribery. His case was called by Justice Goff immediately after the latter fixed a date for sentencing the gunmen convicted yesterday.

John B. Stanchfield, Hyde's attorney, protested that Justice Goff could not legally preside, but was overruled, and the work of selecting a jury proceeded with a rapidity in marked contrast with the delay in bringing Hyde to trial.

Walter N. Tinsley, a coal dealer, was the first juror chosen, thus becoming the foreman.

The specific charge against Hyde at this time is the personally compelled Joseph G. Robb, the former head of the Northern Bank, to lend the Carnegie Trust Company $180,000 by threatening to withdraw all the city funds from the Northern Bank if Robb failed to do so, and that he also promised to deposit $150,000 of the city's money in the Northern Bank if Robin consented to lend the money.

FAMILY ABANDONS HOPE FOR RAYNER, WHO IS NEAR DEATH

LYNN "SNIPPER" GETS TWO YEARS' SENTENCE

Carl J. Mann, known as "Jack the Clipper," was sentenced to two years in the Concord Reformatory by Judge Lummus in the Lynn Police Court today. Mann is twenty-four years old. He was convicted of clipping the hair of Dorothy Vernon, eleven, of Cliftondale; Marion Colby, fourteen, and Thelma Wyatt, fourteen, both of Lynn. It was charged that Mann caught the three girls on Union street and cut their long braids off. Mann was released from the Concord Reformatory but week, after serving a sentence for a similar offence.

HIGH SCHOOLS MAY PLAY IN STADIUM

The football game for the schoolboy championship of the United States between the New York High School of Chicago and the Everett High School may be played in the Harvard Stadium, if Mayor Fitzgerald can make the necessary arrangements with the Harvard authorities. Under the law only events in which the college is interested can be held in the Stadium, if admission is charged, since the college property is not taxed. The Mayor said he would be willing to waive this point if Harvard proved willing.

MAYOR LOSES YET ANOTHER SWEATER

Automobile thieves will soon have enough of Mayor Fitzgerald's sweaters to stock a store. Today the Mayor learned the third jersey purchased the past month had been stolen. The loss was discovered as the Mayor was starting out to open church fairs in Saxonville, South Framingham and Concord Junction. He will wind up today's social program by attending the annual reunion of St. Peter's parish, Dorchester, tonight.

FEDERAL JURY PROBES GRAND TRUNK DEAL

While President Mellen of the New Haven was addressing the legislators at the State House today on the trolley situation in the western part of the State, there came the announcement that the Federal Grand Jury, sitting in New York, had started an investigation of the deal by which the extension of the Grand Trunk Railroad to Boston and Providence has been halted. Asked about the Grand Trunk situation here today, Mr. Mellen gave out the following statement:

Mr. Mellen has signed what is in effect a proposition to Mr. Chamberlin for a twenty-five year agreement, but it has not been accepted by Mr. Chamberlin, and Mr. Mellen is without knowledge as to what action Mr. Chamberlin will take.

Mr. Mellen was asked by another interviewer:

"Mr. Mellen, would you mind answering two or three questions relating to the Grand Trunk affair?"

Mr. Mellen paused, then replied:

"Well, I don't think it would be exactly right or courteous to make any statement on the Grand Trunk matter at this time. The Department of Justice is investigating the matter, and, while that investigation is going on, it would not be judicious for me to argue my side of the case."

Secret Federal Inquiry.

The federal inquiry in New York is secret. The circumstances surrounding the deal between the New Haven and Grand Trunk will be carefully examined for the purpose of ascertaining whether the agreement involved a combination in restraint of trade and foreign commerce by stifling competition.

Among those known to have been called as witnesses are Timothy E. Byrnes, vice-president of the New Haven, who was at the State House with Mr. Mellen today, and Alexander H. Cochrane, a member of the board of directors.

United States District Attorney Wise, aided by a special representative of the Department of Justice at Washington, has charge of the probe. Mr. Wise refused to discuss the case today, saying it would be a violation of his oath of office to give out any information.

The Boston News Bureau says today:

In view of the current Washington dispatches stating that Attorney-General Wickersham is being supplied with official information relating to negotiations between the New Haven and Grand Trunk interests, the following outline of the situation, obtained from an unusually well-informed source, is of interest:

"An agreement, though it may be that it is not even yet signed, and that it may, because of the public furore over the matter, never be put into effect, has been arranged for at least four weeks between President Mellen on the one hand and Chairman Smithers and President Chamberlin on the other.

"The chief terms of this agreement do not give any new trackage rights in New England to the Grand Trunk railroad system, and the concessions to it are no greater than those destined by the late President Hayes a number of years ago. This agreement, following the negotiating of which work on the proposed Southern New England line was suspended, and then officially defended on the ground that the Central Vermont Railway might go into insolvency if the Grand Trunk interests did not come to terms with the New Haven interests, upon which it has been dependent for valuable train and traffic connections."

"BODY OF O'CONNOR BOY BURIED THERE"

JOSEPH O'CONNOR OF ROXBURY

A post-card received by the Roxbury Crossing police today says that the body of this boy, whose home is at No. 21 Phillips street, Roxbury, is buried in the Chestnut Hill woods. The boy vanished November 8.

BULLETIN.

At 1:45 p. m. ten Brookline police, under Sergeant Gleason, reinforced by a score of civilians, began beating the woods on the Brookline side of Chestnut Hill in the search for any trace of Joseph O'Connor, while the Brighton officers were hunting around the Chestnut Hill Reservoir.

The Boston police received three postcards today, all purporting to come from the strangler who killed Joseph Josephs of Lackawanna, N. Y., and who wrote postcards to the Lackawanna, Buffalo and Boston police.

One card, bearing the longest message of the three, said J. Frank Hickey, now under arrest in New Jersey, was not the murderer of Joseph Josephs at Lackawanna, and also that the body of the "O'Connor boy" can be found "in Chestnut Hill wood."

This was taken by the police as a reference to the disappearance of Joseph O'Connor of West Roxbury, who disappeared from home November 8.

A second card declared the writer was "not fooling."

The third card said the writer would confess a murder soon.

The police of Brookline and Newton were notified about the mention of the O'Connor boy's body being at Chestnut Hill.

The Brighton police station was also notified and sent a squad of men to Chestnut Hill to search.

While police headquarters did not say it placed any credence in the postcards, this search of the woods was presumably regarded as only prudent.

The First Post Card.

The first post card was an ordinary United States penny card. It was mailed at 9:30 last night at Roxbury Crossing station, according to the postmark. It was addressed to "Chief of Police, Station 10, Roxbury."

On the back was this message:

Boston, Mass.

Chief of Police:

Dear sir: Hickey is not the one

The above list means sailings from Boston to Hamburg from May to mid-October, while steamers will arrive at Boston from Hamburg from May to mid-November.

There will be two sailings a month each way. This is the same as the Boston-Liverpool services of the Cunard and White Star lines now.

The completion of this sailing list indicates the early and thorough preparation the Hamburg-American directors are making for their Boston service, now that satisfactory arrangements have been made with the Boston Port Directors to provide suitable docking accommodations for the liners at the Commonwealth Pier.

THREE NATIONS DEMAND SERVIA MAKE APOLOGY

VIENNA, Nov. 20.—Germany and Italy today joined Austria in demanding of Servia an apology and explanation for the attack upon M. Prochaska, the Austrian consul at Prizrend.

Servia is believed to be on the point of yielding to Austria's requests as a result of the added diplomatic pressure, whereas she probably would have not given away to Austria alone. Prochaska also represented Germany and Italy at Prizrend.

N. Woodward, superintendent of the Shore Line division.

CORN IS KING AT BIG SHOW TODAY

The Corn Exposition is on at Horticultural Hall. It is the best, the management declares, yet given. "New England corn is king," but there are many minor exhibits. There is Flint corn and Dent corn, corn in tiwes, single ears and in heaps, white corn, yellow corn, Indian corn, biggest ears, littlest ears, tallest stalks, shortest ones and freaks. Even the freaks are prize exhibits.

A. M. Wyman, from Montague's, is there with the declaration that broom corn can be made to pay in Massachusetts, and he has the samples to prove it.

The State agricultural colleges display results of their experiments at fertilizing specimens of hybrid corn that are revolutionary to the average farmer.

It is apparent that 100 bushels of shelled corn to the acre is in the range of possibility. Potatoes, apples, pumpkins and other products add to the interest.

One demonstrated result is that corn can be raised from good seed and be made to pay in any part of Massachusetts, and most anywhere in New England. A good attendance for the opening day was apparent early this afternoon.

The exposition will continue to and include next Sunday.

TWO AMESBURY MEN HEROES AT EXPLOSION

AMESBURY, Nov. 20.—The bravery of Edward Hogan and Patrick Griffin in shutting off the gas and power at the risk of their own lives, it was said today, was all that prevented the loss of many lives and the destruction of much property when two buildings of the Amesbury & Salisbury Gas Company were wrecked by an explosion.

Hogan smelled the escaping gas and ran toward the engine room to notify Pat Griffin, the fireman, to shut off the power. As he reached the engine room door, the roof blew off the purifying room and the walls were buckled out. A second explosion followed, tearing the walls and roof from the chemical storehouse.

Hogan was showered with bricks and lumber and the entire plant was enveloped in a sheet of flaming gas.

MELLEN HEARD AT STATE HOUSE

President Charles S. Mellen of the New Haven system today opened his heart to the Legislature of Massachusetts through a special recess committee, regarding his pet ambition of opening up the Berkshire regions by a system of trolley lines to be built by his company under authorization of the Commonwealth.

He was invited to the State House, and with him came Vice-Presidents Hymes and Storrs, the latter being in full charge of all the subsidiary lines of the corporation, which include the trolleys.

Mr. Mellen, speaking in his usual soft, well modulated tones, was in a happy mood and spoke very frankly to the committeemen, sometimes with wit and at his best times with a tinge of sadness, as he told how the Commonwealth of Massachusetts had denied him when he wanted to finance "More Worlds to Conquer."

He declared, in answer to questions by the chairman and others of the committee, that he would by all odds rather the State should build the same trolley lines proposed than that he should shoulder the worry; and he added it would not cost his company so much.

But he pointed out that he was committed to his policy and that to stop now would break his faith with the people of the western part of the State.

Awaits Action of the State.

Mr. Mellen declared that no matter what he proposed, he had been misrepresented; that sometimes he felt rather disappointed at legislative action; but that he would keep his word to the communities if possible, though he would rather abandon the whole proposition to the State.

He said in reply to queries as to whether or not the trolley lines proposed would pay, that the whole New Haven system must be considered when it comes to financing individual properties, for, he explained:

"We have steam railroad lines, trolley lines and steamship lines. All are part of the whole. Each one contributes to the other. You cannot tell what a trolley line built out in the Berkshires into an unsettled country will pay. But we do know that one that we built, twenty miles long, through an unpopulated district, served as a bridge to two other systems, and afterward became a paying investment.

Yoking Up the Trolleys.

One of the features of any proposed legislation is the question of yoking up the Berkshire, Springfield and Worcester trolley systems. By connecting lines this could be done, though the small auxiliary lines which the New Haven desires to construct might not pay at first, as Mr. Mellen stated.

He remarked that in the Berkshire region the trend of travel was toward New York, rather than eastward.

Mr. Mellen spoke with considerable feeling at times regarding any bill that might be reported to the Legislature, saying that he has had a pretty hard time trying to get the General Court to take his advice in the past. He said that he never for a moment thought that the bill of last year would become a law, and so he did not worry much about several features that were objectionable to his corporation; and he added that he was not very confident that any bill which might be presented at the coming session would be enacted.

Representative Meaney of Blackstone, member of the committee, asked Mr. Mellen a question in regard to rates between different towns in western Massachusetts. He replied:

I'm going to say something for which I probably will be published when the newspapers hear of it. I don't control the trolleys, and I am under an injunction from the Supreme Court prohibiting me from having anything to do with them. If you agree to give me back the western Massachusetts trolleys we formerly owned, we will spend $5,000,000 developing western Massachusetts.

Representative Hardy of Huntington, member of the committee:

"You said, Mr. Mellen, you favored the submission of the question of deciding not what trolley lines should be constructed to some tribunal. Would it not be well if this Legislature gave an opportunity to the people of western Massachusetts to be heard and then decide what lines should be constructed?"

Mr. Mellen:

I have no objection. All I am interested in is in dodging that responsibility. I want to set a screen between myself and those who will be disappointed in the matter of extension. Therefore, I wished the matter to be left in the hands of a tribunal in which the people of western Massachusetts will have confidence. They wouldn't have confidence in me. They think I'm trying to get the better of them. I would like to see them all satisfied. I am satisfied I cannot satisfy them all.

GIVING THE LAUGH TO NEW ENGLAND

For the first time in the memory of the oldest newspaper photographer, Charles Sanger Mellen, president of the New Haven R. R., posed for his picture today. He was at the State House—and apparently eager to spread the smile all over New England. "Laugh, Mr. Mellen, laugh," said the photographer.

"I can't," said Mr. Mellen. Then he did laugh.

HICKEY DENIES HE'S STRANGLER

BLACK HAND.

In the lower left-hand corner of this post card was drawn a black circle, as if meant for a skull.

Compare Handwriting.

This card was delivered to Captain Hanley of Roxbury Crossing police station. Captain Hanley read it, telephoned police headquarters, then sent the card to headquarters by a patrolman. The police noticed that even the address of the card betrayed ignorance of Boston police organization, for there is no "chief" at a station, but a captain.

The grossly ungrammatical wording in the message, the mistake in the word "Deguiers," evidently meant for "Dugues," and the clumsy phraseology, were all noted.

The police began to compare this card with the post card received a few days ago and with the photographic facsimiles of the handwriting on the post cards received at Buffalo and Lackawanna.

The Second Card.

The second postcard is a picture postcard, addressed:

"Chief of Police, Boston."

On the half of the front side used for correspondence is the following:

"I am not fooling you. Just to give you an idea of where I am at, follow and compare cards."

In the upper left-hand corner of this card were the initials B. S. H.

On the back of the card, under a comic picture, were the printed lines:

"A Merry Widow hat covers a multitude of sins.—Dippy Dope."

The Third Card.

The third post-card was addressed:

"Police Station, Boston."

It was mailed at the North Station at 10 a. m. today. It was all in hand-printed lettering on an ordinary post-card, as follows:

"I will confess murder, Copley Square, very soon. Please have mercy."

Captain Hanley of Roxbury Crossing station is of the opinion that the first post card was written by a crank. He gave his men instructions to keep watch for the O'Connor boy, also to watch for any suspicious appearing persons mailing post cards anywhere in Station 10 district.

As soon as the second and third cards were delivered at headquarters, the inspectors seized them and began comparison with the handwriting on the first card. As the third card is in lettering, instead of ordinary writing, comparison of penmanship availed little.

HICKEY INDICTMENT RETURNED; TOWN IS AROUSED AGAINST HIM

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 20.—An indictment charging murder in the first degree was returned by the Supreme Court grand jury today against J. Frank Hickey, accused of the murder of seven-year-old Joseph Josephs of Lackawanna.

Feeling in Lackawanna over the murder of seven-year-old Joseph Josephs is so high that when Hickey, the suspected murderer, arrives here, he will be lodged in the Erie County Jail and will not be taken to Lackawanna. Foreign residents of Lackawanna have threatened to lynch the murderer of the little Syrian boy.

Chief Gilson of Lackawanna has wired that he and District Attorney W. C. Dudley will leave Toms River, N. J., with Hickey tonight, arriving here tomorrow. Today they questioned Hickey. Extradition papers for Hickey were forwarded to Governor Dix at Albany today.

There is no doubt that we have the right man," said District Attorney Dudley when he left the jail with Gilson.

"When Hickey is taken back to be tried for the murder for Joseph Josephs he will be identified by a man who on the day the boy was killed saw Hickey going from saloon to saloon in the vicinity of the murder."

Chief Gilson said he was as confident as Mr. Dudley that the real murderer had been caught.

The police of Buffalo and Lackawanna claim to have a strong circumstantial case against Hickey, despite his protests of innocence.

The timekeeper at the Rogers-Brown Company's works, where Hickey was employed at the time the boy was murdered, testified Hickey was absent on the day of the crime.

Handwriting experts testified that the writing on incriminating postal cards received by Chief Gilson was the same as Hickey's signatures on hotel registers and pay vouchers.

RIVERS FREE IN CONTEMPT CASE

Mayor Frank A. Rivers of Chicopee was found not guilty of contempt of court by Judge Morton in the Supreme Judicial Court today, in the proceedings against the Mayor charging him with refusing to reinstate John U. Barnes as city marshal.

But Judge Morton did rule that Mayor Rivers must pay the costs of the proceedings.

Judge Morton said: "I have quite a good deal of suspicion that the Mayor of the city was not in great haste to put Barnes back, but I am not of the opinion that he intended to set at nought the rescript of this court. If I thought so I would take a different view of the case.

SOME PRECEPTS BY HETTY GREEN

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Mrs. Hetty Green, the world's richest woman, will celebrate her seventy-eighth birthday tomorrow in the usual manner—by working. When she was told today there were many men and women who might wish to follow the example set by her in leading a long and successful life, she volunteered the following advice for them:

Don't envy your neighbor.

Don't overdress, that is, don't dress shabby, whether you have the means or not, for that will arouse envy and jealousy in be aroused in others.

Don't fail to dress warmly. In cold weather low cut gowns and the vanity of some women cause many deaths.

Don't fail to go to church. The church needs you and you need the church.

Don't eat anything but good, wholesome food. Home cooking is the best. Don't cheat in your business dealings, for sooner or later your conscience will begin to trouble you, and later you will worry yourself in to your grave.

Don't fail to be fair in all things, business and otherwise, and never kick a man when he is down.

Don't forget that riches gained by such acts you must leave behind some day, and that when you depart, if your riches have been gained by these means you will find the doors of Heaven closely bolted against you.

Don't forget to be charitable and don't falsify. Don't forget to take a lot of exercise, of which walking is the best. Don't forget to obey the laws of God, for they were the first laws. By so doing you will live as God wished you to live. Give unto Caesar that which is Caesar's and unto God that which is God's.

After giving this advice Mr. Green volunteered the information that she is going to move back into her old $18 a month cold water flat in Hoboken. She is living temporarily with a friend. She said she couldn't spare a day from her office even to celebrate her birthday.

STEAMER PENOBSCOT AGROUND ON "LUMP"

PATHAM, Nov. 20.—The coal-carrying steamer Penobscot, with ten men aboard, ran aground at 8 a. m. today on the shoal known as the Eighteen foot Lump between Shovelful and Pollock Rip lightships. The Monomoy Point life-saving crew put out in their lifeboat for a three-mile pull to the stranded steamer. The weather is clear and the sea quiet. It is thought the steamer will be floated on the next tide.

WHITE, TYRRELL ARE CONFIRMED

By unanimous vote the Governor's Council this noon confirmed Governor Foss' appointments of ex-Representative Norman H. White of Brookline as chairman of the Commission on Economy and Efficiency for two years at $5,000 a year, and of Francis X. Tyrrell of Chelsea to be a member of the same commission for one year at $3,500.

The council postponed action by one week on the appointment of Dr. L. Vernon Briggs to be chairman of the State Insanity Commission.

The reason given for postponement is that the nomination, as sent in by the Governor, was not in legal form. The Governor designated Dr. Briggs for the chairmanship. The State Insanity Commission has power to select its own chairman.

Confirmation of the White and Tyrrell appointments and postponement on Dr. Briggs took the Council only fifteen minutes.

The new Commission on Economy and Efficiency, of which Mr. White is now the head, has power to investigate all State departments, commissions and institutions, as well as all matters relating to state finances.

Cheaper Coal for Thanksgiving, bu Turkey Price Soars

Here's all the latest news about the cost of living:

Coal, 50 cent drop.

Turkey, 35 to 38 cents a pound.

Laundering of collars and cuffs one-half cent rise.

Laundering flat work 5 cent rise.

Sirloin steak dinner at hotel, 35 cent rise.

Small breakfast steak, 15 cent rise.

Coal is to drop fifty cents a ton before Thanksgiving, according to the wholesalers. It is due to come the first of next week, but while it will cost less, perhaps, to cook the Thanksgiving turkey, the turkey himself is going to cost more than he did last year. From 35 to 38 cents a pound is to be the prevailing price for a good turkey, according to the dealers. The only chance for a drop is an influx of birds the last moment.

The well-to-do have just received a hard knock from H. C. L. Living at the best hotels is going up. One reports an increase of 15 per cent. on the price of its small steak. This since last Thursday.

It's cheaper now to buy venison than beef steak. Venison dinners come a dollar, for the same style with beefsteak and it costs a dollar and ten cents.

MRS. JOHN ASTOR IN ASTOR BOX AT OPERA

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Mrs. John Astor occupied the Astor box at the Metropolitan Opera House for the first time in a number of years. On the death of John Jacob Astor, the box became Vincent Astor's. With her was Lady Majory Carlisle, who is staying at the Ritz-Carlton. Mrs. Astor wore a dress of white satin, trimmed with silver spangles. Her jewels were pearls and sapphires.

Suffragists for Wilson Guard in Inaugural Parade

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—For the first time in the history of the United States marching women will form a large section of the inaugural parade next March. Woodrow Wilson, on his way to take the oath of office, will be accompanied by a body guard of suffragists.

The State suffragist association of the District of Columbia has voted to request the inaugural committee to give them a place in the parade, and the women have received private assurances that this request will be granted. Ten thousand women, they estimate, will answer the appeal. Many of them will be women who actually cast a vote for Woodrow Wilson for President in the States which have already granted equal suffrage.

ACTOR KNIGHT HERE FOR SURGEON'S CARE

SPRINGFIELD, Nov. 20. — Percival Knight, comedian of "The Quaker Girl" company, whose collarbone was broken in a motor car accident in Springfield Sunday night, is in Boston for an X-ray examination of the fractured bone. Bob Wrenn Bested by Fred Herreshoff in Cafe Encounter

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Robert N. Wrenn, Harvard graduate, former quarterback of the Crimson football team and four times champion tennis player of the United States, is said to be home as the result of a fistic encounter with Fred Herreshoff, runner-up in two national golf championships, in the Venetian room of Reisenweber's cafe one morning last week.

Mrs. Herreshoff, who was May Faulkner, a show girl, until she eloped with the wealthy young athlete two years ago, was the innocent cause of the clash. Both young men are well known Wall street brokers, and their fight is a choice morsel of gossip in financial circles.

Wrenn, it seems, joined Mr. and Mrs. Herreshoff at their table at midnight and remained until 2 a. m. About that time he referred to Mrs. Herreshoff's stage career in a manner that angered Herreshoff, and the battle followed. Both belligerents admitted the facts of the incident today.

Million Dollar Stock of GEORGES Clothes Must Be Sacrificed for Ready CASH

A Word of Appreciation and Invitation

Last Thursday, Friday and Saturday, and this week so far, the first days of my Reorganization Sale, have been the biggest in the history of Georges. Only those closely familiar with the popularity of my policy can fully appreciate what tremendous selling this means. I wish here to express my appreciation of the splendid response.

My Boston manager informs me that his selling force has been unable to cope with the demand. Additional salesmen are now at the Boston store, and I invite any customers who may not have received their full measure of Georges service to come in and let us adjust everything to their entire satisfaction.

THIS Reorganization Sale, in its terrific price sacrifices, is not of my own choosing. Believe me, I don't relish the necessity of making such reductions as I've been forced to make in this extraordinary event. But I have no alternative. I am simply forced to make a big cash settlement with the senior member of this firm, who is shortly to retire. And the only way I can do it is to turn my vast stock in my five great stores into cash quickly.

And when I have a real, definite object, I let nothing stand in the way of my making a success. Profit, cost, everything is forgotten in the relentless cutting of prices.

These are the Reductions Throughout the Stock

$15, $18 & $20 Suits & Overcoats Now	$10
$20, $22.50 & $25 Suits & Overcoats Now	$12
$25, $28 & $30 Suits & Overcoats Now	$15
$30, $32.50 & $35 Suits & Overcoats Now	$18

And so on upwards, including the aristocrats of my stocks, formerly $35 to $75—now in the Reorganization Sale, $20, $22.50, $25, $30 and $35—embracing silk-lined suits of the finest imported fabrics—up to luxurious Montagnac overcoats.

More of those Smart Chinchilla Overcoats Just Arrived

Good news for those who were disappointed last week. 200 more of my clever Chinchilla Shawl Collar Overcoats, single or double breasted models, grays and blues. My regular price $40, and equal to the $50 products of finest Merchant Tailors—now in Reorganization,

SWEAR DAKOTAN IS LAWFUL HEIR

Many volunteer witnesses appeared at the East Cambridge Court today to testify in behalf of Dakota Dan as a result of the statement made on Monday by his attorney, William R. Scharton, that he would close his case that afternoon. Through the mails came the names of new witnesses, offers of financial assistance, letters of encouragement. In some instances the letters contained money.

The first witness today was Mrs. Mary Lindsay Harrington of Melrose, who for a great many years was a neighbor of the Russells. Many incidents related to her by the Dakota claimant convinced her that he was the real Daniel Blake Russell, she testified.

"In speech the claimant resembles his mother," she testified. "But otherwise he resembles his father."

Mr. Scharton endeavored to get in as evidence the fact that as late as 1909 the late Senator Russell made an attempt to locate his missing boy. Scharton also tried to get into the evidence an intimation that the Always had persuaded Senator Russell to do nothing further, alleging that Daniel Blake Russell had been killed in a railroad accident. Master Pevey excluded the evidence.

"Did you see Fresno Dan here in the courtroom?" asked Scharton of the witness.

"I saw him every day he was on the stand," said Mrs. Harrington.

"Did you hear him speak and observe his actions?"

"I did."

"Was there anything about him that reminded you of Daniel Blake Russell?"

Attorney Nason objected to the question and noted an exception when Master Pevey admitted the question. The witness then answered:

"Not any whatever."

FISHWICK HELD IN BONDS OF $5,000 FOR CINCINNATI COURT

Thomas Fishwick of Cincinnati, arrested with others in eight different cities of the country on a charge of a scheme to defraud by use of the mails, waived extradition today before United States Commissioner Hayes at the Federal building and was held in $5,000 for appearance before the Federal District Court at Cincinnati in February. Fishwick and others were arrested on a charge that the American Redemption Company of Rochester, N. Y., and the Chicago Debenture Company of Cincinnati were using the mails in a scheme to defraud, involving over $1,000,000.

GOVERNOR NAMES SEVEN OFFICIALS

The nomination of William B. Martin of Holyoke to be a member of the State Board of Registration in Pharmacy was sent to the Executive Council today by Governor Foss. Other nominations were: Edward Eaton of Stoughton, to be assistant medical examiner for Norfolk County; Eugene C. Heath of Marlboro, to be assistant examiner for Middlesex County; William L. Johnson of Uxbridge, to be medical examiner for Worcester County; Tuscon A. Cunniff of New Bedford, to be clerk of Third Bristol District Court (New Bedford Police Court); Walter C. Bayliss of Taunton, to be trustee of Massachusetts Hospital School; Edgar D. Hill of Plymouth, to be medical examiner for Plymouth County.

POSTPONE ACTION ON PETITION OF DAVIE

Final action on the petition for the pardon of Robert E. Davie, "the boy broker," who is serving five years for embezzlement, was again postponed one week when the Executive Council met today. This is the second postponement since the petition was referred to the Council by Governor Foss. Councillor McGregor, who is handling the fight to secure freedom, said: "Davie's condition is very poor. He had a serious fainting spell the other day, and I am told that he has lost five pounds during the past week. But the members of the Council will not be convinced that his condition is very serious before they decide."

FRANKFURTS POISON FOUR IN BROCKTON

BROCKTON, Nov. 20.—Suffering from what is believed to be ptomaine poisoning, Mr. and Mrs. James Quinn and three of their four children are ill at their home at No. 731 North Montello street. Dr. John A. Petley declares that the illness was undoubtedly caused by frank furts which they ate for dinner. Mrs. Quinn's condition is the most serious.

BOY WINS CORN PRIZE.

Ernest S. Russell, seventeen, a freshman at the Massachusetts State Agricultural College, has been awarded the prize in the juvenile class for raising the largest acre of corn during the past season. Russell, whose home is in Hadley, harvested ninety-three bushels of Hickney corn from an acre. The prize is a trip to Washington, D. C.

Important to all Women Readers of this Paper.

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer a great deal with pain in the back, bearing down feelings, headache and loss of ambition.

Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and may be despondent; it makes any one so.

But thousands of irritable, nervous, tired and broken-down women have restored their health and strength by the use of Swamp-Root, the great Kidney, Liver and Bladder Remedy.

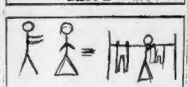
Swamp-Root brings new life and activity to the kidneys, the cause of such troubles.

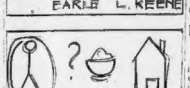
Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp-Root, the great Kidney, Liver and Bladder Remedy will do for them. Every reader of this paper, who has not already tried it, may address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghampton, N. Y., and receive sample bottle free by mail. You can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at all drug stores.

Sign Contest for the Swains

Cherchez La Femme This Week

SOME ANSWERS





Use the Sign Language and You May Win Prize for Your Trouble.

Now romance enters this "Ramsayite" sign-writing contest.

For the magic sentence, which readers are invited to translate into sign-words, a la Sir Alexander Ramsay, this week deals with the search of a wife.

As the French say, it's a case of "Cherchez la femme." Maybe a number of young men, who are too bashful to propose, may find signs a happier medium of expression. They may practice on the "Ramsayite" editor if they wish.

The sentence for sign practice this week, with samples of some contributions already sent in, reads thus:

"I want a wife. Must be good housekeeper."

Who can tell—maybe this will be the weirdest means of starting more than one romance! Look these over and then try your hand at it.

Five prizes of $1 each will be offered for the best sign sentences.

REPORT SUICIDE OF REBEL LEADER

CITY OF MEXICO, Nov. 20.—A story has been received from Vera Cruz that Colonel Diaz Ordaz, who was confined in prison in San Juan De Ulua for assisting General Felix Diaz in his last revolt, committed suicide in his cell.

POLICE OF REVERE SEEK IDENTITY OF SUICIDE IN SURF

The town and park police of Revere tried today to get some clue to the identity of a woman who drowned herself at Oak Island end of Revere Beach.

This is the first suicide by drowning at Revere Beach since the Metropolitan Park Commission assumed jurisdiction there, sixteen years ago.

The woman waded into the surf and deliberately drowned herself, so far as could be seen by spectators who were unable to get there in time to rescue her.

The body, now at the North Grove street morgue, is described as follows: Age forty-five, height 5 feet 4 inches, black checked jacket, black skirt, white shirtwaist without collar, black shoes and stockings. In her pocket were found a key, a soiled one dollar bill and a pair of gold-bowed spectacles in a case stamped with a Brooklyn (N. Y.) optician's name.

No Rest for Weary Mr. Wilson; Beset by Dinners in Bermuda

HAMILTON, Bermuda, Nov. 20.—There's no rest for Woodrow Wilson, at least not here. There is a possibility the President-elect may cut short his visit here and go elsewhere to avoid the social whirl into which he is being drawn against his will. Although it was the expressed wish of Governor Wilson "that he be let alone" during his stay, so he might get a rest, invitations are pouring in on him, and it now seems impossible for Mr. Wilson to escape a great state dinner which the Governor of Bermuda, Lieutenant Sir George M. Bullock, is said to be planning in his honor.

When William Jennings Bryan arrives there will be more work. Mr. Bryan's visit is expected to have a marked influence on the next national administration. Mr. Bryan is coming to discuss possible cabinet members and future government policies.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 20.—Four bodies have been uncovered by the receding waters of the canal known to the police as "the crime sewer," which is being drained.

Blanche Kimpin, a negress, seventeen years old, of Peoria, Ill., was one victim. A hole in her forehead seems to indicate that she was murdered.

JEALOUS MAN TAKES 3 LIVES

was Wood's intention to kill his other son, John, who is eleven years old. But John as well as his sister, Gladys, thirteen years old, was saved.

In his letter Wood mentioned his son "John" and "Milton." The boy's name is John Milton Wood.

Nichols and Miss Young called George R. Dickinson of No. 7 Lake street. He informed the police. They broke into the room. The baby was found in its crib. Wood and his wife were in bed.

Wood was clothed and lay on his back, his feet hanging under him. The room was filled with the odor of chloroform. On a table in the centre of the room was a sixteen-ounce can of chloroform—enough to kill many persons.

Wood has been employed by the Walker-Arrington grocery store for twenty years.

The letter was somewhat rambling and indicated that Wood was laboring under a great mental strain.

Letter Left by Wood.

The letter left by Wood was written on the note paper of Hotel Arlington, No. 18 West Twenty-fifth street, New York city, and was dated November 18, 1912. It read:

Buy a lot in Hope Cemetery for about $50, and have it taken care of, and have a vault built for Bessie, Raymond and John so we can be buried in one vault, size.

Be sure and have the children, Gladys and Milton, taken good care of. Do not let the ——'s have anything to do with the children or the property left after expenses have been paid. Sell the lot in back to pay expenses. Keep all the furniture, silverware and pictures for the children, and sell the old furniture in the attic.

Have Walter Nichols try to take care of the children and have a home with them because they love him. Try to keep the home of the children because the income will help them in getting an education.

If Gladys wants to go to her grandmother's, Mrs. John W. Wood, No. 34 Baker street, let her go. Keep a strict hand over Milton Wood.

You will find my bankbook in a small bureau drawer, and those of Milton and Gladys are also there. I have in my pocket $200, which I think will buy a grave and build a vault for Bessie, Raymond and John. Be sure we are put in one vault.

Do not let the ——'s into the house before or after we are gone, and don't expect any flowers from them. Have Mrs. F. Bottorff look out for the house until you have a guardian appointed for the children. If Walter Nichols does not want to take care of them,

Have Lawyer Sibley, the older of the two brothers, have charge of everything. Goodbye to everybody. I couldn't live without my little girl. Bessie. I worshiped her.

I would like to have Rev. Henry Washburn bury us if he would.

Put on Bessie's wedding dress. It is in the large box in the front room in the attic. My clothing is on the large chair all ready. Give Henry Wood my raincoat if he wants it.

(Signed) JOHN WOOD.

P. S.—I want to thank Walter Arnalgton, Sr., and Walter Arnalgton, Jr., for their kindness toward me in letting me have bill (a house, which I have had a very good time with, and I hope they will help the children if force is ever put on them. Thank Fred Wyman for me for the loan of the carriage and harness. Goodby to all.

(Signed) JOHN WOOD.

Medical Examiner Frederick H. Baker viewed the bodies and declared it was a case of a double murder and suicide.

Banker Forgives His Eloping Daughter

Lenox Organist Wins Miss Turnure

MRS. ALLAN B. FENNO, HEROINE OF CHOIR ROMANCE.

The picture shows Mrs. Fenno in a costume in amateur theatricals.

Congratulations flowed in on young Mr and Mrs. Allan B. Fenno of Lenox and New York yesterday following their elopement and marriage in New York. She is the beautiful nineteen-year-old daughter of George E. Turnure, a New York banker.

Fenno is an organist at Lenox. Miss Turnure came as a volunteer in Trinity Church, the fashionable church of the Berkshires. They fell in love and slipped off to New York and got married.

It was generally thought that there would be a scene at the banker's home when he learned that his daughter had married an organist. But Banker Fenno did not prove to be that kind of a papa. He gave them his blessing.

"Going to make a banker out of your son-in-law?" Mr. Turnure was asked.

"No," he replied with a laugh. "You see he is the only organist in the family, and I guess we'll save him remain an organist, if he will. My daughter seems to like him that way.

"These things have become so very common that they may be expected to happen with regularity. I suppose they are off honeymooning now, though they took the time to send me a telegram. I am very fond of Elizabeth and I do hope she is happy and always will be. I have several children, you know, and I suppose this had to happen with at least one of them."

Mrs. Fenno is twenty-one. The bride is the granddaughter of Charles Lanier, the banker, who also has a home at Lenox.

GOV. BALDWIN WOOS THE POETIC MUSE

DANBURY, Ct., Nov. 20.—Governor Simeon E. Baldwin made his debut as a poet today in the following verse, which he wrote to Lawyer Charles W. Murphy, of this city, the poet-laureate of the present Legislature whose term expires at the end of this session:

When the new Legislature comes in
Our poet of last year we shall miss.
But upon some one we will certainly win
By his work as a lawyer, and this
Calls for more than a greater part
Than a humble bid for staying away.

"PORTIA" DECIDES AGAINST HERSELF IN DIVORCE SUIT

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 20.—Mrs. Annabel Arnold, an attorney, who educated her husband as a physician, decided a law point against herself in Judge Grimm's Court in her suit for divorce from Dr. Walter R. Arnold.

Her attorney, Eustace C. Wessler, attempted to introduce in evidence a letter written to her by her husband. Turning to the plaintiff, Judge Grimm said:

"Now, Mrs. Arnold, I want to ask you, as an expert on law, do you think this letter is competent evidence?"

Without hesitation, she replied:

"This letter would properly be considered a privileged communication between husband and wife."

"That is the court's view," said Judge Grimm.

SAGE TEA DARKENS FADED GRAY HAIR, KEEPS THE SCALP CLEAN AND HEALTHY

Cures Dandruff, Stops the Hair from Falling Out and Makes It Grow.

There is nothing new about the idea of using Sage for restoring the color of the hair. Our grandmothers kept their hair dark, glossy and abundant by the use of a simple "Sage Tea." Whenever their hair fell out or took on a dull, faded or streaked appearance, they made a brew of Sage leaves, and applied it to their hair with wonderfully beneficial effect.

Nowadays we don't have to resort to the old-time tiresome method of gathering the herbs and making the tea. This is done by skillful chemists better than we could do it ourselves; and all we have to do is to call for the ready-made product, Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, containing Sage in the proper strength, with the addition of Sulphur, another old-time scalp remedy.

This preparation gives youthful color and beauty to the hair, and is one of the best remedies you can use for dandruff, dry, feverl h, itching scalp, and falling hair. Get a fifty cent bottle from your druggist today, and you will be surprised at the quick results. Any druggists sell it, under guarantee that the money will be refunded if the remedy is not exactly as represented.

SAYS ELSIE RAYMOND MADE THREAT TO KILL

KENNEBEC COUNTY COURTHOUSE, Augusta, Me., Nov. 20.—New and startling testimony came today in the trial of Mrs. Elsie Hobbs Raymond, who is charged with slaying Mattie Hackett in a fit of jealous rage seven years ago. Asa J. Swan of Lewiston, a new witness, testified that Mrs. Raymond, before her marriage to Bert Raymond, the Elmwood Hotel boniface, had used these words:

"If Mattie Hackett ever crossed my path, I would kill her."

A second surprise in the testimony today came when Mrs. Rose Milliken, wife of Dr. Milliken of Readfield, who lived in the same house with the Raymonds at the time of the murder, gave evidence showing that Mrs. Raymond was absent from her home nearly four hours on the night the Hackett girl was strangled to death.

Ethel Hackett a Witness.

The testimony, including also that of Miss Ethel Hackett, sister of Mattie, and who has worked in Boston as a head waitress for the past two years, was regarded as of the greatest importance by the government in its attempt to fix the responsibility for the murder on Mrs. Raymond.

The evidence of the three women witnesses came soon after the taking of testimony began before Judge Whitehouse this morning. It came suddenly and unexpectedly, and men and women spectators who filled the courtroom thrilled as the witnesses told the details of incidents and events the government claimed had a vital connection with the grim tragedy of the night of August 17, 1903.

Mrs. Swan, the Lewiston woman, was the first witness of importance. She told of having been employed at the Elmwood Hotel and how she became acquainted with Elsie Hobbs and Bert Raymond. Raymond was then courting. A pin could have been heard to fall, so tense was the stillness when Mrs. Swan told of being in the girl's room and hearing her say that if Mattie Hackett ever crossed her path she would kill her.

Surprise for Spectators.

After that the spectators hung breathless upon every word of the testimony and the speed with which the evidence was unfolded indicated that County Attorney Williamson will expedite his side of the case as much as possible. None expected more than a day detail of medical testimony at the opening of court today.

The Elmwood Hotel played a prominent part in today's development. It was announced that Mrs. Simmons, the mysterious missing witness in the case for whom the State detectives have long searched, has been located in Calais and that she will be brought here at once. She was employed as a cook at the hotel in 1905, and is wanted because of her part in a search for Mrs. Raymond the night of the crime and because of conversations she is said to have had with Mattie Hackett and Bert Raymond before the murder.

During the testimony today Mrs. Raymond appeared calm. She listened intently, occasionally whispering with her counsel, Congressman "Dan" McGillicuddy and Attorney Frank Morey, two of the best-known criminal lawyers in the State. Seated near the accused wife were her husband and their four-year-old daughter, Evelyn. The little child apparently was unable to comprehend any part of the scene enacted about her today. When her mother listened to the witnesses, the child looked with curiosity from judge to jury and about the room. Mrs. Raymond will tell her own story to the jury.

Balks at Telling Age.

The first witness called today was W. B. Getchell of Augusta, a civil engineer. His evidence brought out the fact that the distance from where the body was found at the Hackett home to the Sedgeley House, where the Raymonds lived, is 11,280 feet along the road, and that the route the government claims was taken by Mrs. Raymond is 744 shorter.

Mrs. Swan said she was employed at the Elmwood Hotel in 1903.

"I became acquainted with Elsie Hobbs and Bert Raymond when he was courting her," said the witness. "He was employed in the hotel."

The only amusement at the morning session came when the witness was asked her age. She looked squarely at Judge Whitehouse, asking pointedly:

"Your Honor, am I obliged to tell my age to the jury?"

Judge Whitehouse replied:

"Of course the jury understands you are more than fifteen and less than one of sixty."

At this Mrs. Swan added:

"Yes, I'm between fifteen and sixty. Let it go at that."

The witness was questioned by County Attorney Williamson.

Q.—Did you ever hear Elsie Hobbs refer to Mattie Hackett? A.—Yes, one night when I was in Elsie's room she said to me: "If ever Mattie Hackett comes in my path, I would kill her."

Q.—What was Elsie Hobbs' attitude toward Mattie Hackett? A.—She appeared greatly disturbed about Mattie Hackett and frequently asked Bert if he had seen her.

Why Story Was Withheld.

On cross-examination by Congressman McGillicuddy the witness said that she had not said much about this because she did not want to be summoned in the case.

Q.—Why did you not mention her evidence until a year ago.

A.—At that time I became sick in Lewiston," she said. "I called in my lawyer and told him what I knew. He wrote to County Attorney Williamson. I got well and then was summoned as a witness."

Miss Ethel Hackett, sister of the dead girl, was next sworn.

Q.—How old are you? A.—I am twenty-eight.

Q.—Where are you living at the present time? A.—I have lived in Boston for the last two years.

Q.—What is your occupation? A.—I am headwaitress in the Knollton Tea Room at No. 162 Tremont street, Boston.

Q.—Where were you in July, 1905? A.—I was at home.

Q.—Were you called to the Elmwood Hotel? A.—Yes, I was. My sister was working at the hotel at the time. She was taken ill. I went to take her place as a waitress. One night about three or four days later Mattie was able to be my home. Bert Raymond took Mattie and myself to our home in a team. At the hotel previous to our going Bert introduced me to Mrs. Raymond. He told me to go and walk up the road and meet him coming back from Mrs. Simmons'. We arrived home, left Mattie at the house and then Bert and I started back to the hotel.

As we drove by the Dickerson house, about 800 feet down the road from our house, Mrs. Raymond suddenly appeared from the side of the road. Bert was trying to hug me at the time. Mrs. Raymond jumped into the team, getting in unnoticed. On the way back to the hotel there were very few words spoken.

The object of the testimony of the sister was to show that while her husband was driving the team, Mrs. Raymond had walked quickly enough to meet him returning a short distance away from the Hackett home.

Mrs. Rose Milliken, wife of Dr. Milliken of Readfield, was the next witness. She said she had occupied a part of the Sedgeley house at Readfield Four Corners.

"I lived downstairs," she said. "The Raymonds lived upstairs, one year.

Q.—On August 17, 1905, did you see Mrs. Raymond about ten o'clock? A.—She passed through my basement to go to the cellar.

Q.—What time was that? A.—About 9 o'clock.

Q.—Did you see Mrs. Raymond's husband about ten times? I can't swear to that, but I have a recollection that I did.

Q.—After seeing Mrs. Raymond, did you see her again? A.—Yes.

The witness said her family consisted of the doctor, his mother, his sister, her own child and herself. She said that after supper she had gone onto the front lawn and had seen Mattie Hackett's father talking with a load of hay. She said she remained on the lawn until about 7 o'clock. Asked if she had heard anyone leave the house, she said she had—at about 7:10 o'clock.

"At 8:10 Dr. Milliken was called to the Hackett house as a result of the murder," said the witness. "About 9:00 o'clock I saw Mr. Raymond come downstairs to my front door. He asked me if I had seen his wife. He went outdoors by the front door and a few minutes later returned. He said he thought he would get a team and search for his wife. He asked me again if I had seen her. I said I had not. Dr. Milliken's mother and myself searched through the house for Mrs. Raymond. We looked through all the closets but could not find her.

Saw Mrs. Raymond Crying.

"I saw Bert Raymond take the team and leave the house. It was a very clear, bright night. The moon had risen.

"The next thing I saw was Bert Raymond, his brother, and Mrs. Raymond driving into the door. They went upstairs. She was between the two brothers and was crying. I went upstairs and talked with her. I asked her where she had been. She said she had been sitting in the orchard. I asked her why she had gone out there to sit so long.

"'Because my husband was cross,' she told me."

Q.—What time was that, Mrs. Milliken? A.—It was about 11 o'clock that night.

Mrs. Annie Milliken, mother of Dr. Milliken, eighty-five years of age, corroborated the testimony of her daughter-in-law and said that she saw Mrs. Raymond on her way to the cellar about 9 o'clock.

"When did you see her again?"

"After 11 o'clock."

"Where did you see her at that time?"

"Bert Raymond and his brother were supporting her as they were helping her upstairs."

"How was she dressed?"

"In dark blue."

Saw Raymond with Girl.

The witness testified as to the number of times that Bert Raymond had spoken to his wife, and that she told him that he had better take a team and go and look for his wife.

"When did you hear about the murder?"

"Shortly after the doctor was called to the Hackett house. I was in bed at the time and got up and dressed. Everybody was somewhat excited and greatly worried about what had become of Mrs. Raymond."

The next witness was George M. Lane, Readfield farmer. Mr. Lane testified that two days before the murder he saw Bert Raymond and Mattie Hackett riding toward the Hackett house.

"I was on my way," said the witness, "to the grist mill and shortly after seeing Bert Raymond and Mattie Hackett I saw Mrs. Raymond walking in the same direction."

The witness said that following the news of the murder he went to the scene of the crime, or where the body was found, and discovered on the Dickerson road a horse running across the cornfield from where the body was found to a point opposite the gate on the Nickerson road.

One phase of the defence, or the line along which the defence hopes will lead, is the question of time which enters into the case. The defence will endeavor to show by the cross-examination of government witnesses and their own witnesses that it was impossible for the defendant to have walked from her home to the Hackett place and return within the short period of time which she is said to have been missing during the night of the crime.

Wants "Mama" to Come Home.

Mrs. Raymond spent a restful night in the jail and was up bright and early today. She ate a hearty breakfast and appeared in the jail office preparatory to going to court shortly after nine.

Little Evelyn was on hand early to greet her mother. Mrs. Raymond clasped the little girl in her arms and kissed her several times.

"When are you coming home, mama?" the child asked repeatedly. She was assured that on Saturday her "mama" would be with her.

700 LESS B. & M. CARS THIS YEAR

Vice-President Henry J. Horn of the New Haven Railroad, in charge of the operating department, on the stand in the hearing at the Federal Building before Examiner Ward Prouty today declared that the Boston & Maine road is operating between 700 and 800 cars less than the road did last year.

The admission came in answer to a question from Examiner Prouty, who is conducting the hearing for the Interstate Commerce Commission, and proved a surprise for the New Haven officials in the room. Vice-President Horn said:

The Boston & Maine owns 25,800 cars. We are 700 to 800 cars short of the number operated last year because it is necessary to own 700 or 800 old cars to the scrap heap every year.

Can't Tell Policy.

"Is it your policy to replace a certain number?" the examiner insisted. "Do you buy 500 or 600 new cars every year?"

Horn said he could not say what the policy was and that all he could testify to was what had been done. The examiner asked how many cars had been purchased during the past year.

"I haven't got a list," was the answer.

Vice-President Horn made a plea for the overworked clerks. Mr. Horn thought he should not be compelled to put his clerks to work getting information that Louis D. Brandeis said should be on the tip of his (Mr. Horn's) mind.

Not One Steel Car.

It also developed that the Boston & Maine Railroad does not own a single all-steel car, and that Mr. Horn, head of the operating department, does not know how many cars have been smashed or injured by train wrecks since July 1.

This question was asked by Mr. Brandeis both in connection with the New Haven and the Boston & Maine.

"It seems a remarkable commentary on the management of these roads if they don't know what it costs in dollars for such important and expensive accidents as they have been having."

Vice-President Buckland addressed the examiner. He said:

"Counsel seems to be conveying the impression that these accidents are regular things on the railroad. Mr. Horn doesn't propose to pass a law to that effect the information can be procured."

Buckland Explains.

John T. Marchand, counsel for the commission, asked Horn for the number of cars the expense of which had been authorized. At this Vice-President Edward J. Buckland, of the New Haven, jumped to his feet, saying:

"We have requested the Railroad Commission to permit the New Haven bonds to purchase 6,000 freight cars, and this is part of the $7,000,000 bond issue we asked for," he explained.

Examiner Prouty said he thought information should be had as to how many cars have been purchased. Horn replied that he did not have the figures at hand, but could get them.

Big Surprises Coming Sunday $40,000 Contest Pure Business

No Need for Discouragement Even for Those at the Bottom of the List.

BY THE CONTEST EDITOR.

Sunday will be a day of surprises to candidates in the $40,000 contest.

Surprises to many candidates who have felt that because of the gigantic votes of the leaders, the prizes offered by the contest were beyond their reach.

Sunday's vote list will prove conclusively that no one in the contest has any advantage over any other that may cause discouragement even on the part of the candidate whose name is at the very bottom of the list.

The Contest Editor wishes to again impress upon all contestants that any candidate who even half tries will receive as a reward for his or her efforts a valuable prize which will amply compensate for any effort expended.

It should be remembered that the final prize list contains 1,501 awards, and this means the absolute certainty of every active candidate being a winner.

Three Big Announcements.

Watch for three big announcements in next Sunday's AMERICAN:

First—The first vote standing, containing a record of all coupon and subscription votes received by the Contest Department up to 10 p. m. on last Saturday night.

Second—The announcement of the winners of the $1,545 special prizes.

Third—A special announcement by the Contest Editor of vital importance to every candidate.

It is possible for any candidate to get ten or twenty or thirty subscriptions before next Sunday the Contest Editor's best advice is to go out and get them without delay. You will realize the importance of this advice next Sunday.

This is not a hit or miss competition. It is a purely business proposition. As rewards for securing thousands of Boston Sunday AMERICAN readers, $40,000 in cash and prizes will be paid to the ones who secure these subscribers. That's absolutely all there is to it. It's a case of "paid in full" for value received.

No Two Opinions.

With the capital prize of $10,000; with the prizes of $1,000 in cash; with 1,493 other big awards, there can be no two opinions about the advisability of working harder than you ever worked before in your life to secure this remuneration.

Be sure that you see this contest in its true light—as a pure business proposition. Decide to invest your time and effort with the laudable ambition of capturing the $10,000 prize, one of the $1,000 prizes or any one of the other rich awards.

Look around you and see the men or women—and they are not many—who are worth $10,000.

How did they acquire this sum of money? By being discouraged at every obstacle that presented itself? By being fainthearted? By being lazy, indifferent or neglectful of opportunities?

No, indeed! They saw what they wanted and went out after it—worked—plugged—hustled!

A Winchester Hustler.

So make every day count big in subscription returns. There never will be such another opportunity to earn big rewards.

The baseball fans of Winchester and surrounding towns are supporting the AMERICAN subscription and voting coupons. John Plummer, aged thirteen, of No. 33 Westley street, Winchester.

John says he is working the bit-and-run play and every other kind of a baseball scheme in securing the all-valuable subscriptions for the Sunday AMERICAN, and judging from John's work up to date, Winchester fans will have something to be proud of before his campaign for the $10,000 is finished.

BIG GIFT SAVES DALLIN STATUE

Cyrus E. Dallin's statue, "The Appeal to the Great Spirit," saved from removal from Boston as the result of publicity given the matter by the AMERICAN, may be placed in the Fens, at the corner of Charlesgate West and Boylston road. The AMERICAN interested public-spirited citizens to contribute to the fund for the purchase of the work of art, and now the fund has been completed by a gift of nearly $10,000 from Peter C. Brooks of No. 2 Deerfield street.

Mr. Brooks, who is a brother-in-law of Bishop Lawrence, favors letting the City Park Department choose the site. The Art Commission favors the Fens site, but the other subscribers to the fund of some $12,000 which saved the statute are divided upon the question. Arthur Fairbanks, director of the Art Museum, thinks that the present location outside the museum is ideal, but says he would waive the choice of site if the statue can remain in Boston.

"It is the work of one of our best artists, whose statues now stand in parks of other cities," he said, "and while there is none in our parks. The presence of so excellent a work of art is a decided step towards a higher standard of public sculpture in Boston."

Every day when he could take his morning ride past the Museum of Fine Arts Mrs. Brooks has stopped and admired this statue.

AMORY WILL GIVES $500,000 TO HELP MATERNITY HOME

A fund which probably will amount to $500,000 is left to the Boston Lying-In Hospital by the will of Francis Amory, who died a bachelor at the age of seventy. Harvard College is left $50,000 for astronomical study, and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences $25,000 for prizes for the discovery of remedies for certain diseases. Excepting these two and smaller bequests all the rest of the estate, which though an exact estimate cannot be made amounts to much more than $1,000,000, is bequeathed to the Lying-In Hospital.

This is to accumulate twenty-one years. Then it is to remain permanent and distinct, and to be called the "Francis Amory of Milton Maternity Fund." It is in memory of his grandfather.

Heavy Weight On the Stomach
Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Remove It and All Other Forms of Indigestion Quickly.

That awful feeling as though there were a heavy weight on your stomach—as though you had swallowed an enormous lump of lead—is caused by the failure of your stomach to thoroughly digest your foods. You may have eaten too fast or too much. Your stomach may be over-worked and tired out. It is too weak to produce enough of the digestive juices necessary to take proper care of the food. Gases form and cause all sorts of aches. The stomach demands more pepsin, hydrochloric acid and other digestive agents which it is unable to secure.

Medicines are not only worthless in cases of this kind but are actually injurious to the whole system. It is folly to hurry or pour a lot of vile stuff into the stomach—drugs that have no digestive power whatever.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain ingredients that not only bring quick relief to indigestion sufferers, but actually digest the food for the stomach. One of these little magic tablets taken after each meal, will rest the stomach, revitalize the digestory glands, strengthen the muscular walls and fast, tone up the entire digestive system.

No home should be without Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets constantly on hand. They ward off forms of indigestion such as sour stomach, belchings, heartburn, dizziness, burning sensation, brash, etc. After a brief course of treatment your appetite improves. You enjoy your food more. You awaken every morning with a happy disposition. Life looks brighter. Your brain becomes clearer and your eyes sparkle with their old time snap and twinkle. You are practically a new person.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are sold by all druggists at 50c a box.

"PASSERS-BY"
A TRIUMPHANT SUCCESS!
"There is compelling, irresistible charm about 'Passers-By' that will make it a success that is not delightful here is a play that is not delightful here is a play that is not delightful here is a play

MAD DYNAMITER UNDER GUARD

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 20.—Albert Henry Davis, who was knocked insensible by a detective while he was carrying an infernal machine containing sixty half-sticks of dynamite, is in a hospital today under guard, where the police will question him as to his motives in carrying about enough explosive to have destroyed a city block and killed scores of people. He is undoubtedly deranged.

Officers searched Davis' house, but found no explosives or anything that resembled infernal machines. There were all sorts of contrivances and devices, numberless gears and lever arrangements indicating that he had given much time to the study of machines.

When Detective Hostick knocked the man unconscious in the Central Police Station the fuse of the infernal machine was automatically ignited, but Detective Samuel L. Brown grabbed the box, with its fuse sputtering and hurled it into the street.

'Passers-By' a Human Drama Appeals to High Sentiments

CHARLES CHERRY AND MISS IVES IN "PASSERS-BY"

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

Turning the wretched story of a girl gone wrong into a cheerful, humane drama is not the privilege of every playwright, yet Mr. C. Haddon Chambers appears to have made some progress in that direction with "Passers-By." Of all the plays of the year that have invited heart-throbbing sympathy, none has made its appeal more directly to an audience, and none has had an audience respond more quickly or willingly than the four acts of splendid entertainment at the Hollis Street Theatre.

Mr. Chambers made it a matter of plain, straight-from-the-shoulder argument. He rather fosters his audience when the lady in the case failed to fumble into hysterics at her first appearing with the man who had assisted her from the straight and narrow, both. Seven years is a long time to remember details, and Peter Waverton was properly surprised when the pale but interesting Margaret informed him that the child was getting to be a big boy. It was the first news that Peter received concerning his parental responsibilities, but, like the well-groomed Englishman of the London drama, he viewed the matter philosophically. Naturally he would do much for his son. But Margaret preferred to continue in the simple role of a seamstress—it suited her pride and, besides, the pay was satisfactory.

Appeals to Sentiment.

In spite of the ugly appearance of things, the situation assumed a peaceful aspect from the start. Waverton, bored by society's conventions, amused himself with the less fortunate of the city's people. He kept open house for back drivers and human derelicts. It was more diverting than bridge, and brought him in contact with a humanity that seemed broader than his own. As played by Charles Cherry, Waverton was robust and loud, without losing sympathy. He presented the playwright's argument in faithful fashion, and you were led to the discovery that human hearts beat regularly under all kinds of ribs. It was made clear that the best of us are bad, and the worst of us are good being merely a matter of vision.

There were threatening clouds when Margaret and the boy joined Waverton's house party. Beatrice, the fiance, and Lady Hurley, a lobby specialist in womanly virtue, could not be depended to meet the situation as philosophically as Waverton and Margaret had done. No, indeed, they couldn't—and Lady Hurley didn't. But Beatrice, bless her—Waverton's own words—had large eyes for the future, and they were sensible eyes, for she suddenly discovered that she wanted a husband who could play golf and gossip, and Waverton was a rank failure in recreation of that kind. So she "chucked" him.

"Passers-By" was rich in its appeal to decent, human sentiment. It was cheerful and uplifting, and without a depressing moment. Mr. Cherry was a manly gymnasthete Waverton, and a safe comedian at all times. Alma Belwin surrounded Margaret with an atmosphere of refinement that made her early "mistake" appear trivial. Charlotte Ives was distinctly agreeable as Beatrice, in spite of a tendency to shout. At times she was rather rough on the ears.

Lewis Edgarde was an artistic delight as Burns. Here was an outcast beyond redemption, preferring his own terrifying existence to the better things that were offered him. Mr. Edgarde made the character impressive. The old hack man of A. G. Andrews was a little heavy, but easy to take.

"Passers-By" is worth trying for any complaint you may have against yourself. It is humanity and cheerfulness transmitted for the particular good of those who are weary of the sordid things of the theatre.

MARQUARD NAMED IN KANE DIVORCE SUIT

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Rube Marquard is named as corespondent in a suit for divorce filed by Joe Kane against his wife, Blossom Seeley, who was Marquard's vaudeville partner. The Giants' pitcher is now involved in two suits as the result of his friendship with his vaudeville partner. He filed in the Supreme Court his answer to the other, which is for $50,000, and brought by Kane, who alleges the alienation of his wife's affections.

100 MORE HOOD CO. EMPLOYES WORKING

One hundred more operatives were admitted to work at the Hood Rubber Company's plant at East Watertown when the plant was opened today. It was expected that about 300 would be taken on before noon. The first hundred admitted made a total of 3,000 working out of the regular force of 4,500. Factory officials said that tomorrow the rest of the operatives would be given work except a few. The police guard of fifty is to be reduced soon, possibly tonight. There was no picketing today.

WALLS OUT FOR STATE BOARD

By PHILIP J. HALVOSA.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 20.—Following an all day discussion of the Sherman anti-trust law as applied to trade unionists, the American Federation of Labor convention today resumed its deliberations with the question still pending. Andrew Furuseth, president of the Seamens' Union, and chairman of the committee to which the question has been recommitted, makes this declaration:

The law must be amended, or repealed. Under the ruling of the courts, in the Loewe case against the Hatters' Union its restrictive provisions today are held to apply to labor power. This means that life itself is subservient to the anti-trust law, for labor power and life are synonomous. We want the law confined to the things pictured by the power of labor, which alone are property rights. As free men we refuse to countenance involuntary servitude by permitting any man to acquire a property right in our lives.

Samuel Gompers, president of the federation in his closing address declared the amendment or repeal of this law to be the paramount issue before organized labor today. Still other speakers asserted that under the latest interpretation of the measure, this must be done in the near future if trade unionism is to live.

Under a previous ruling of the convention, immediate consideration now will be given to the industrial trade union contention raised by the Socialist delegates. This promises to be the titanic struggle of the convention, the Socialists claiming to control 7,000 of the 18,400 votes therein.

Emmett J. Wall, of Brockton, representing the Massachusetts State Federation of Labor, today announced his candidacy as a member of the Massachusetts Conciliation and Arbitration board. He has received assurances of support from several of the State delegates representing still other organizations. A petition to Governor Foss asking that Mr. Walls be given the appointment already is being circulated here.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

The first of the 1913 automobile shows is now being held in Atlanta, Ga. According to all accounts is it a booming success. Many of the 1913 models which have not yet reached Boston are to be seen in the Atlanta exhibit. From recent reports some actual sales are being recorded.

An alderman in Atlanta has a novel way of keeping track of automobile owners and operators. He has introduced into the City Council a resolution which will cause every one who operates a motor vehicle in his city to call the city clerk and register a photograph of him or herself together with personal data.

In case an accident occurs and the injured person does not secure the number of the car, they may go to the registrar and by looking through the "Rogues' Gallery" pick out any individual whom they may think was operating the car. There is little chance of this resolution being enacted.

"Eddie" Vail, salesmanager of the Hoffecker speedometer, is back from his first trip to the factory with a pocket full of orders. He landed a contract with the National Motor Vehicle Company and the Hoffecker will be a part of the equipment of the next series of cars that this concern turns out.

Norman Holliday, in charge of the truck department of the local Packard Company, recently had the entire Y. M. C. A. class on a tour of inspection through the Fuller plant on Commonwealth avenue, when he explained to the class in detail the method of adjustment, care of and driving of motor trucks.

MISS MARY M'GRAW, 'LADY SARSFIELD,' IN 'SIEGE OF LIMERICK'

The Irish drama, as many of the Irish in America would have it exemplified will be seen next Monday evening in Boston College Hall when the "amateurs of the Father Tom Burke Dramatic Club stage "The Siege of Limerick."

Last year the same organization was seen in the college hall in "The Mayor of Galway," a production so enjoyable and successful that the demand was made for "more." To meet this demand the members of the club have been hard at work for months. Special scenery has been painted, accessories have been brought from the old country, nothing has been overlooked that would make for truth and sincerity. The cast of characters:

General Sarsfield	Joseph B. Quinn
M. de Boisseau	John Fagan
M. de Lacour	William Meehan
Colonel O'Donnell	John Quinn
Duke of Berwick	Joseph Cheever
Lord French	M. J. Quinn
Captain Power	Joseph Cheever
Captain of the Guards	Joseph Meade
Maeve O'Brien	Robert E. Moody
Captain Farrell	Joseph Ward
Lady Honoria Sarsfield	Miss Mary Mcgraw
Viva St. Ruth	Miss Kathleen Quinn

Other members of the club, to the number of fifty, will appear as the "Girls of Limerick," the "Soldier Boys," and so on. Miss Mary McGraw, cast for the important part of Lady Honoria Sarsfield, is said to be one of the histrionic "discoveries" for which Boston is famous in the revival of the theatre.

The Father Tom Burke Dramatic Club dates its name from the most eminent of Irish Dominicans. The aim of the club is to give encouragement to the higher order of the Irish drama.

RESUME PLEA IN ETTOR DEFENCE

SALEM COURTHOUSE, Nov. 20.—Attorney James Sisk resumed the closing arguments for the defense at the trial of Ettor, Giovannitti and Caruso for complicity in the murder of Annie Lo Pezzi during a Lawrence strike riot. Sisk attacked the credibility of stories of witnesses for the prosecution without mercy. Detective Flynn of Lawrence was characterized as one who took the stand and deliberately and wilfully swore to a false hood.

He also flayed the witness, Louis La Conte, the young detective, who testified to a confession by Caruso. He also asked the jury to disregard the witness who had served a term in a Texas school and also in a boys' reformatory, and who had covered up the fact that he was a married man with a family.

Attorney Sisk, in his argument, attempted to show that the testimony of Harold Kanada, the most damaging witness against Caruso, was filled with contradictions and inconsistencies.

"Kennedy and not Kanada is the man's name," said Attorney Sisk. "He was told the story of the killing by Inspector Yose, who rode with him from Boston to Salem before taking the stand. He swore that it was a clear night on January 29, and he withdrew several statements on important matters that he had previously sworn to."

YOUNG CZAREVITCH SUFFERS RELAPSE

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 20.—Grand Duke Alexis, the Czar-oid Czarevitch, who has been ill since he was injured at the imperial hunting lodge at Spala early in October, has suffered a relapse, and grave rumors were current today. Dr. Israels, the famous Berlin surgeon, has been summoned, indicating that an operation will be performed.

CHILD COVERED WITH RINGWORM

Herpes and Brown-Tail Moth Itch. Had to Wrap Him in Sheets, Lay in Stupor. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Entirely Well.

29 Knight St., Auburn, Me. — "My son was eight weeks old when he was completely covered with what the physicians call ringworm, herpes, and brown tail moth itch. In places all over his face, head and body were round circles resembling ringworm and finally his whole body became covered in one great sore, so we had to wrap him in sheets. Beneath the surface of scabs was a well of matter. He was in such shape that he was not allowed to be seen by visitors, and scars were upon his body from what few healed up. In the place of one that healed a dozen new ones would spring up. He got to the place where he did not fret much, but rather lay in a stupor. Some one advised me to try Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. I raised the scabs and bathed him with a lather of the Cuticura Soap and after washing, put the Cuticura Ointment on. When I did this, the scales washed off of many, leaving the surface a bright reddish hue. The first thing it began to clear up his body and in about six weeks he was entirely well and hasn't so much as a single scar. Cuticura Soap and Ointment have never failed me." (Signed) Mrs. Addie E. Jackson, Dec. 20, 1911.

Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are sold throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

PENN-TIGERS TO ROW HARVARD

There will be a three-cornered eight-oared varsity race between Harvard, Princeton and Pennsylvania next Summer unless present plans miscarry. A tentative agreement has been made by the representatives of the three universities.

According to the proposed plans as now adopted, the first race will be held in Cambridge next May. After that the race will be held in Philadelphia and Princeton every third year. Crews of the three colleges have competed before at the American Henley held in Philadelphia, but there has never been a match race between the varsity crews of these three universities.

Announcement of the new agreement was made here today by Thomas Beath, chairman of the rowing committee of the University of Pennsylvania Athletic Association. Mr. Beath said:

"Our plans have been approved tentatively by the rowing authorities at Harvard and Princeton and I can say that the university authorities here will only be too glad to follow suit. Before the end of the year all the details will have been arranged. Until the agreement is signed by the three schools there is always the possibility of something happening, but only minor details remain to be arranged."

Eddie McDonald Gets Job With the Cubs

Eddie McDonald, who covered third base for the Pilgrims for a part of last season, will be back in fast company again next year. The Chicago Cubs have signed Tom Downey, who has played with the Cincinnati Reds and the Philadelphia Nationals, to the Sacramento Club of the Pacific Coast League for McDonald. Eddie was sent to Sacramento last season by the Pilgrims, but refused to report.

McDonald is one of the most promising young infielders in the National League and was very popular with the "fans" who watched the games at the Walpole street grounds. Eddie was playing a slashing game when he was let go.

Arthur Rose will probably play third base for the Pilgrims next season. He comes from Buffalo, where he made a good record.

SPORTS OF ALL SORTS

BY RILEY

JUST as we thought. Boneiser of Yale, considered hopelessly destroyed as a football player on this day last week, is now hailed as the real "solid" star of the Yale-Princeton game. What is more, Boneiser played right and through the most of the hostilities. So, besides kicking the ball, Sam Felton will have something else cut out for him Saturday. What with standing off the best end in football and outkicking one of the sturdiest boosters in the game, Felton's idea of nothing to do should be a fight with the Turkish army single-handed.

FELTON may need four pairs of arms, besides three legs, to duplicate in the Yale game his performances up to date. He will likely outkick Flynn if he doesn't have to spend too much time and energy outending Boneiser, which latter undertaking is more than enough all by itself.

* * *

AT the other end of the line, Avery or Gallaher ought not to bother O'Brien so much. The Harvard end is a wonderful tackler and a sprinter who can outrun Felton.

* * *

MATCHING Storer and Hitchcock against Warren and Talbot throws all the advantage of tackles in Harvard's favor. Pennock and Driscoll appear to be better guards than Peodleton and Cooney. Yale's experts declare that Keenam is a more successful centre than Parmenter. We're from Missouri concerning that issue. But, on weighing both teams have shown this year, the "dope" gives Harvard a considerable advantage in the line.

IN the backfield, Harry Gardner played remarkable football, showing unusual skill as a field general until the Dartmouth game, wherein he sustained some criticism, not because of generalship, but because the opposition considered him prone to slowness and overdeliberation. Harvard has needed a quick, snappy quarter these many years, but has managed to get along fairly well without dazzling work in that position, except in 1909, when the Crimson was in an awful mess at quarterback in the crisis. But Gardner seems safer than any other man who has played the position in Haughton's regime. Yale is not so well equipped on past performances. Wheeler, of course, is the best of them. But Wheeler's work this year has not compared with Gardner's.

SPAULDING and Philbin—to whose is now added Pumpelly—will be the mainstays at halfback for Yale, of course, as Brickley and Hardwick will be for Harvard. The Yale backs, except Pumpelly, are veterans, while Harvard has two new men on the varsity. Everybody knows what Spaulding and Pattiin have done in season and out. They are regular stars. Against such backs, Brickley and Hardwick have not yet been matched. None of the halfbacks who have played against them this year has showed them up, nor has anyone brought out their skill in a way that can give a fair basis of comparison with the Yale couple. Of course, Brickley will do the field goal kicking for Harvard, which gives him a shade on the Bulldog pair.

NOW, we come to the fullback position, where "Bullet" Wendell will tackle "Lefty" Flynn. Flynn was stopped at Princeton. Wendell has yet to meet his match. Look for one of the best battles of the game—that scrap between Wendell and Flynn.

* * *

FLYNN, of course, will have to divide his time a bit, punting against Wendell and, with Harold Pumpelly, booting for field goals against Brickley.

* * *

PUMPELLY comes into the fray as an added starter, injected into the problem because he iced a fifty or fifty-three-yard goal from field Saturday. Maybe that effort was a "dash." You can't "dope" out his ability as a regular on that essay.

* * *

FROM the sidelines it looks like a battle between Felton and Brickley against Flynn and Pumpelly, once kicking should be the decisive factor in the game.

SIDELIGHTS ON SPORTS

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

OPPOSITION to the re-election of Thomas J. Lynch as president of the National League has openly developed in the person of C. H. Ebbets, president of the Brooklyn club. Mr. Ebbets is actively engaged in trying to secure votes for Robert Brown of Louisville. Mr. Lynch, it is said, will make no campaign for re-election, but will rely on his record as head of the National League to win the fight if one develops beyond the activities of Mr. Ebbets. The latter is opposed to Mr. Lynch because two years ago the National League president wrote him rather a sharp letter. Mr. Lynch has never explained why he wrote this letter, but has given hints that he had been constantly annoyed by the Brooklyn magnate on the subject of umpires.

MILLER HUGGINS, the new manager of the St. Louis Nationals, hasn't yet succeeded in making any trades. After the meeting of the minor leagues in Milwaukee, which was attended by President Murphy and Manager Evers of the Cubs, Huggins hurried back to St. Louis and sought a conference with Mrs. Helen Britton, owner of the club, who says she is going to have considerable to say about future deals for players. The conference between Mrs. Britton and Manager Huggins has not been reported to the press, but it was probably substantially as follows:

Huggins—I want to swap Hauser for Mitchell and Grant.

Mrs. Britton—Please don't say swap, Mr. Huggins. Use the word exchange; it sounds much better.

Huggins—I beg your pardon—exchange.

Mrs. Britton—Isn't Mr. Grant that tall, lean person, and isn't Mr. Mitchell slightly knocknecked?

Huggins—Yes, but—

Mrs. Britton—Do they use tobacco in any form?

Huggins—I believe one of them chews.

Mrs Britton—Horrors. No, I think we better not make the exchange.

Huggins—But Mr. Grant is a graduate of Harvard.

Mrs. Britton—Harvard! Well then we will consider Mr. Grant. But not Mr. Mitchell.

Huggins—But Mr. Mitchell is a .300 hitter. He knocks the cover off the ball.

Mrs Britton — Never mind about that. There are other things besides mere batting.

Huggins—But Mr. Mitchell parts his hair in the middle, and he dresses very neatly.

Mrs. Britton—Well, perhaps on second thought you may make the exchange. Mr. Hauser, they tell me, wear detached cuffs.

French Boxing Wonder Battles in a New York Ring Tonight

By JACK CONWAY.

CHARLES LEDOUX, the doughty French bantamweight champion, will make his American debut in a New York ring tonight. He is scheduled to clash with Battling Reddy in a ten-round contest.

Ledoux is the boxing sensation of Europe. He is a smiling, good natured boy and has been pastiming within the squared circle for only a few years. In this time he has engaged in fifty-four battles and he has won fifty-two of them by the K. O. route.

OUT TO WIN WORLD'S CHAMPIONSHIP.

This is a marvelous record for any boxer. Few, if any, men have come near equalling it. The French lad came to this country recently with the intention of proving to all that he is the world's bantamweight champion. He is ready and eager to meet Johnny Coulon, Kid Williams, Jimmy Walsh, or any other boxers who claim that title.

Ledoux has a better claim to the bantamweight championship than Coulon has. He has defeated the majority of the "headliners" in this class, a thing which the Chicago favorite has never accomplished.

Coulon never won the bantamweight title from a boxer who held it. He merely claimed the championship after defeating a 105-pound boy by the name of Murphy, and he was supported by several sporting writers. Johnny then built up a reputation by defeating second and third class boxers.

Beat Bowker and Stanley.

The French idol, however, has knocked out Jem Bowker and Digger Stanley. Both of these men at one time held the championship. They were considered wonders, and yet this smiling, precious youth from the Republic on the other side of the Atlantic sent them to the canvas for the fatal count. He certainly is not overrated.

Ledoux is not a very good boxer. I do not believe that he has ever spent a great deal of his time mastering "inside boxing." Coulon, Williams or Walsh would be able to hit him at will, for he has no defence to speak of.

In the past, Charley has met some clever men. Bowker was always considered to be a classy boxer, while Digger Stanley was able to hold his own with the cleverest of them all when he was in his prime. And yet neither of these men's cleverness amounted for a great deal when they met the stout hearted French lad. He just waded in and took their punches dush on the point of the jaw, but always landed a mighty wallop in return. And finally both Bowker and Stanley were knocked out.

Some wonderful boxers have been developed during the past decade, but none of them have been immune from punishment. There is not a boxer in the world who will not go to the mat if he is hit hard enough and on the right spot.

Is a Terrific Puncher.

The French champion does not weigh over 117 pounds, and yet he can hit as hard as a lightweight. In fact, he can hit harder than most 138 pounders. He is known throughout Europe as the "Little Sam Langford." And every follower of the squared circle knows what a terror Langford is.

Battling Reddy has made a fine record in New York. He is a strong, willing youngster, can hit hard and is fairly clever but will be be able to hold the wonderful Frenchman at bay for ten rounds? This is a task which fifty-two men have attempted, only to fail.

EUSTIS ELECTED CAPTAIN.

MIDDLETOWN, Ct., Nov. 20.—Richard Eustis, '14, of New York city, right end on the Wesleyan football team for the last two seasons, has been elected captain of next year's eleven.

SPORT NOTES

Lexington After Eighth.

The fast-going Lexington High team endeavored to make it eight straight victories this afternoon by taking the scalp of Arlington High at Spy Pond Field, Arlington.

English Out to Win.

The game between English High and the High School of Commerce eleven booked for this afternoon at the Dunbar Avenue Grounds, Dorchester, created a lot of interest and was well attended. English is the slight favorite in comparing the scores made this season.

Greenfield Up-State Champ.

The schoolboy football title in the western part of the State took a queer turn last week when Holyoke High defeated Springfield. As a result of this game Greenfield High claims the title of that section. Greenfield has been the only team to defeat Holyoke this season, and as Holyoke has in turn defeated all other aspirants, the former school team claims the title.

Revere-Chelsea Play Today.

The annual gridiron battle between Revere High and Chelsea High was played this afternoon on the Everett High Athletic Field.

Francis Will Lead Manson.

At a meeting of the 1912 Manson Academy baseball team, Paul Francis of Providence, R. I., was elected captain for next season. Francis has been a star on the nine for the past three years, making the team in his freshman year.

Balk Line Tourney Has a Close Finish

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Willie Hoppe, with five victories and one defeat, and Ora Morningstar, with four victories and two defeats, meet tonight in the concluding scheduled game of the 18.2 balk line billiard tournament for the championship of the world. A victory for Hoppe will give him the championship. If Morningstar wins it will cause a triple tie, including Hoppe, Morningstar and Slosson.

In yesterday's matches Yamada, the Japanese expert, defeated Taylor, 500 to 273. Slosson won from Cline, 500 to 306, and Demarest, by a score of 500 to 160, defeated Sutton.

SCHOOL RESULTS.

At Milton.

The strong Milton High School eleven defeated Abington High in a well-played game yesterday, by the score of 19 to 7. The Milton boys played a slashing game, and at no time were they in danger of being defeated.

At Salem.

Salem Normal and Bridgewater Normal played a 15 to 15 tie game yesterday. The teams were very evenly matched, and the contest was chock full of thrilling plays.

At Lynn.

Lynn English High was beaten by Salem High in a battle royal yesterday, by the score of 7 to 0. The Lynn youngsters put up a great game, and did not acknowledge defeat until the referee's whistle blew at the end of the fourth period.

At Soldiers' Field.

The Harvard sophomore football team won the college championship yesterday, by humbling the senior aggregation by the score of 14 to 0.

At Fall River.

Durfee High easily defeated the East Providence High School eleven yesterday by the score of 46 to 0. The feature of the game was the playing of Captain McCarthy for the winners.

Luscious Grapes are more Tasty than Dry Raisins

Dried-out raisins cannot be compared to Nature's luscious Grapes. Tobacco when pressed in Plug form has more flavor, fragrance and smoking quality than when sliced or granulated for convenience sake.

Chopping or granulating ruins the natural tobacco flavor, as it cannot retain its natural moisture, and every bit of evaporated moisture takes with it some of Nature's good tobacco flavor.

The only way to retain all the flavor is to put the whole leaves under pressure, into Plug form, and covering it with a natural leaf wrapper, thereby retaining all of its natural flavor and moisture.

Prove this today by buying a plug of Master Workman tobacco. Whittle off a fresh pipe load, and enjoy a slow burning cool smoke of delicious flavor.

Can the customs officers impart life, bouquet, flavor to a wine? Can a transatlantic steamship freight department improve the purity and deliciousness of a champagne? If so, by all means pay $2.00 for your champagne—of which Uncle Sam gets 60c for duty and a steamship company 40c for freight. CHARLEY BRICKLEY IS HERO OF 1913 FOOTBALL SEASON

HAUGHTON RAPS DARTMOUTH MEN

Coach Haughton is out in flat-footed opposition to the continuance of football relations between Harvard and Dartmouth.

His stand is assumed from the deliberate attack he made upon the Dartmouth team at the Harvard Club banquet at the Hotel Somerset, in which he denounced the playing of Dartmouth in last Saturday's game at the Stadium.

After this game, in which Dartmouth was penalized three times for collective "rough" play, and during which Harvard men accused Dartmouth players of several individual assaults unnoticed by the officials, there was serious talk at Harvard of playing no more football with the Hanover team.

This feeling at Cambridge was first openly expressed in Haughton's speech at the crew dinner at the Somerset, in celebration of last Summer's victory over Yale. When Toastmaster Robert Bacon called on Coach Haughton for a speech, the football leader said:

I object to the playing of the Dartmouth team in last Saturday's game for many reasons, but principally because it gives football a black eye. Dartmouth gained absolutely nothing by her rough playing. It led to her defeat, while the Harvard players suffered no injury.

Harvard did not use energy to extend herself to dirty tactics, but gave an exhibition of clean and scientific football. The boys were out to win in a fair, manly manner, and the result was a tribute to their heed of the coaches' instructions.

High Feeling Over the Game.

There is much feeling now between Harvard and Dartmouth undergraduates and alumni over last Saturday's game. Harvard supporters were incensed at Dartmouth's play, in view of the necessity of keeping the Crimson players in condition for Saturday's tussle with Yale. On the other hand, the Dartmouth men declared that the rough play w s not deliberate and was due only to overzealousness by the team from Hanover.

As Haughton said, the rough play for which penalties were inflicted cost Dartmouth in the first period its best chance for a goal from field, and in the third period gave Harvard a thirty-yard start on the march across the field that led up to Brickley's goal—the only score of the game.

Forty thousand saw the Dartmouth game Saturday, and nearly that many go every year. The Dartmouth game, therefore, is the chief Cambridge contest in popular fancy in five even years, when Harvard plays at New Haven, and is almost as popular in the odd years when Yale plays at the Stadium the week following the Hanover team.

Upset Football Program.

If the game, therefore, were taken from Harvard's schedule it would mean a tremendous upset of the football program at Cambridge.

Concerning the Yale game, Haughton said at the crew dinner:

Harvard this year is picked to whip Yale, but do not place too much confidence in what you read about the chances of the team, or be guided too strongly by the comparison of scores.

In reality this comparison means nothing. Opinion as to the teams can alone be based on experience. History has shown that Yale has accomplished miracles in two weeks, and in 1910, when everyone was predicting an early win for Harvard, we suffered a moral defeat. We must not get over-confident or allow this present confidence to get to our team.

In conclusion I ask a service of you, that the night before the game that you will wire each member of the team, 'Harvard expects you to win.' If you will do this, I will guarantee their performance on the field.

COACHES MADE BRICKLEY A CHAMPION KICKER

HARVARD WONDER GIVES FELLOW EXPERTS CREDIT FOR SUCCESS

HOW BRICKLEY DEVELOPED THROUGH HIGH SCHOOL, PREPARATORY AND FRESHMAN STAGE.

In the upper right picture is Brickley as an Everett High player; at the left as an Exeter star; in the centre, doing the hop, step and jump, as a freshman, and below, as he is now.

Brickley Says that Daly, Haughton and Wigglesworth Gave Him the Help He Needed.

CHARLEY BRICKLEY, upon whom Harvard relies to win from Yale by the field-goal route, declares that other members of the Harvard team are principally responsible for his great success as the accomplished booter who beat Princeton and Dartmouth.

As a lad in Everett High School, Brickley was a wonderful football player and a marvelous kicker. At Exeter he developed still further in both respects. As a freshman at Harvard he was still further advanced, and his hop, step and jump performance aided more.

Drop Kickers Are Made.

So, Brickley's statement, taken with an examination of his grading, improvement through high school, preparatory school and the freshman period into the Harvard bread-winner, proves that one champion football players or this day and generation are "made" more than they are born football players.

Of course, they have to be wonders at the beginning. But just how much time and work have to be spent to bring them to Brickley's successful stage, may be learned from the Everett lad's own story as told after the Dartmouth game.

"My drop kicking this year," said Brickley, "has caused quite a little comment and I should like the opportunity to say that altogether too much credit has been given to me. It is the passing of the centre and the excellent protection given by the other members of the team which have been responsible for what successful kicks I made this year.

What the Coaches Did.

"When I came up to the varsity squad this year I had very little accuracy and poor direction. But under the coaching of Charlie Daly, Percy Haughton and Wigglesworth I have been able to improve my kicking. I have been practicing drop-kicking ever since a little boy and the results are just beginning to show now."

The persistence, which has made Brickley the most dependable drop-kicker in football this year, was exemplified in the Dartmouth game.

"The wind played an important part in the game," said Brickley. "It blew across the field and was very treacherous on kicks. On the first three field goals that I tried they were all against the wind. I allowed about ten yards for the wind on each kick and was only able to succeed in one."

PENNSYLVANIA STILL AFTER A PLACE ON HARVARD SCHEDULE

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 20.—Chairman Hobart W. Porter of the football committee said today that negotiations with some of the leading colleges for places on their football schedules are pending and that he hoped at the close of the year to be able to make some announcement officially for next year. While the Pennsylvania authorities are busily engaged in making overtures to both Yale and Harvard, they will say nothing as to the success their proposition has received.

WHO'S PUMPELLY? HERE'S THE BOY!

Will graduate from Yale in 1913, this being his first year on the varsity team.

Is twenty-two years old and has been used as substitute halfback all season.

Weighs 183 pounds and is rather tall, being 5 feet 10 inches.

Is a New York State boy, hailing from the city of Owego.

Prepared for the New Haven university at Hotchkiss School.

Was a member of the freshman team last season and played brilliantly.

His kicking of field goals won many hard-fought games for the "freshies."

Harvard Hot Favorite for the Big Yale Game

With the Yale-Harvard game three days off, the odds on the Crimson today jumped from 10 to 9 to 10 to 7. In the financial district Yale men in some cases asked 10 to 6.

This was an abnormal demand. While some wagers were made at 10-to 7, the most prevalent figures were 4 to 3 on Harvard.

The long odds against Yale prevailed because o fthe splendid condition of the Harvard men in comparison with their Yale adversaries and the much more consistent work done by Harvard this Fall.

The Harvard backs start for New London tonight. Only a light drill is planned, and the rest of the eleven is due to leave either tomorrow night or Friday morning. The team is "on edge" for its Yale game, and Brickley, the wonderful booter, showed what he could do by booting three thirty-five-yard field goals.

Who will be the intercollegiate football champion? This is the question which Harvard and Yale will have to settle next Saturday at Yale field. Last year the Princeton eleven succeeded in gathering in that honor through their defeat of Harvard. Yale lost it through its failure to beat West Point and Harvard. On those pivots hung last year's championship.

Records of Teams Are Equal.

This year, however, the Princeton aggregation has been beaten once so far, and has been tied once. If Yale beats Harvard, Yale will have been tied once, giving it all but a clear record, and the lead over other aspirants for the championship title. If, however, Yale is tied by Harvard, the position of the leaders stands thus: Harvard has been tied once, Yale has been tied twice, Princeton has been tied once and beaten once. The positions of the three stand in the order: Harvard, Yale and Princeton. If Harvard wins Saturday's battle it will have a clear field for the championship, while Yale and Princeton are tied for second place, each with a tie and a defeat chalked up against them.

Now note the difference which is apparent between the two teams. The question of comparative scores in the aggregate can be thrown out as there is no particular object in observing that Harvard has rolled up a greater total of points than Yale. But in the separate games, the scores are exceedingly interesting.

Harvard beat Brown 20 to 10, a margin Providence crew 10 to 0, a margin of ten points. So far the advantage would be for Harvard. Again, Yale tied Princeton.

Crimson's Strength in Backfield.

That is a one sided way of putting it. Place against those scores which other teams have made against the Harvard eleven, and it will be seen that there is a weakness in the Harvard defence which does not close out in all this fine comparison of scores. The Brown men crossed the Harvard goalline without a great amount of difficulty, although the line was stiffening up to meet the attack. In spite of the fact that these scores were made against a practically all-substitute line, the fact remains that Harvard could not protect its own goal line. Princeton did to Harvard what it could not do to Yale; that is, it carried the pigskin the wrong side of the Harvard fence at least once for a score.

So that on mere "dope" the two teams are about equal; Harvard having, if anything, a slight technical advantage.

LATEST NEWS ON EVE OF YALE-HARVARD FOOTBALL BATTLE

All but four of the Harvard team are in their best physical condition. The four will be in shape tomorrow.

Castle, Harbison and Pendleton of Yale are not expected to play because of injuries.

Davey Dunn, last season's Yale fullback, has been restored to good standing by the faculty and can play Saturday.

Betting odds have dropped from 10 to 9 to 10 to 7, favoring Harvard.

Yale plans to adopt teh resident coach system, in vogue at Harvard, next season.

Harvard backs, ends and centres will be at New Haven tomorrow.

Coach Haughton denounces Dartmouth's rough play of last Saturday.

YALE WILL HAVE RESIDENT COACH

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Nov. 20.—Yale is on the eve of the most radical change in its football coaching system made since 1889 when a head coach was first appointed. It is planned for a resident permanent coach to be chosen, a system being adopted like that in vogue at Harvard where Percy Haughton has been in charge for five years and has built one of the most efficient systems in the country.

Yale has clung to the system of having a different head coach appointed by each successive captain and the change of authority and coaching system involved in this method, from year to year, has apparently prevented Yale from becoming as formidable as under a system that ensures continuity from season to season.

The change has been recommended by many of the old coaches annually the past three years at Yale, but for various reasons has been side-tracked.

Yale's failure to secure an efficient attack this Fall is taped at the door of the present coaching system. It is felt that no captain of a team, appointed the next year to be coach, can put into execution as powerful a system as a coach who has had years of experience. It is believed that the change in system will be made as soon as the captain for next year is appointed. He will probably be Henry Ketcham, centre for two years.

Some of the names suggested for Yales' new permanent coach are Al Sharpe, Foster Sanford, Tom Shevlin and Howard Jones.

Davey Dunn Back With Yale Again; Three Men Injured

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 20.—A whoop of joy was today given by the Yale football coaches when it was announced that Davey Dunn, fullback last season, was declared eligible by the faculty of the Sheffield Scientific School. He has kept in prime condition by practicing with the scrubs and it is believed that he will be elected for part of the Harvard game Saturday in his old position.

Castles, Harbison and Pendleton, three players who were thought to be sure to round into shape before the Harvard game, will be lost to the team through recent injuries. Easdles is still in the college infirmary, suffering from a cut head, received in scrimmage, while Pendleton and Harbison are suffering from lame ankles.

Pendleton is the sixth player crippled in one position at Yale this Fall, eight guard, Arnold, Randall, York, Harbison and Reed are his five predecessors. Arnold alone of the injured players has returned to the squad. The feeling is growing that other changes may be ordered. Wheeler and Cornell are evenly matched, Cornell having improved immensely during the past two weeks. In the backfield, the coaches have been deeply impressed with the dashing work of Dick Baker and Pumpelly.

Pumpelly Is a Psi Upsilon Now.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 20.—Harold A. Pumpelly of Owego, N. Y., the Yale man who tied the game with Princeton last Saturday by his wonderful goal from the field, was today elected to the Psi Upsilon Junior Fraternity with other Yale sophomores. Pumpelly showed up well in yesterday's practice with the Yale eleven.

WE BOUGHT THAT SURPLUS YARDAGE at probably the lowest prices ever conceded to anyone on goods of their quality.

These fabrics have been tailored into Suits and Overcoats in our own factory, and they are of the most superb character. They are the first word in the luxury of quality and the last word in the decalogue of style.

Hunting a Husband

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

No. 48—Her Aged Butler Becomes Insistent.

THERE was a happy, but tired, quartette in Paul Maynard's car when he stopped in front of Mrs. Miner's bungalow at sunset.

"What a heavenly time we have had!" sighed the widow as she gave her hand to Paul in alighting from the automobile "The weather has been ideal, the car perfect, the company unsurpassed. I wish the whole time was just beginning now."

"I will suggest something better than that," said the host of the occasion. "It is that we do it another day."

"With all my heart:" agreed Beatrice, and Helen echoed her words.

"I suppose you are too tired to come up here this evening, aren't you, Helen?" asked Beatrice. "I would like you and your husband to run over for a while if you care." β

"Thank you, dear, but I am really too tired, and I ought to stay at home. But I shall see you tomorrow without fail."

"Robert will be here for some days yet," said Paul Maynard, "and I now expect to be here longer than he. Therefore it is 'only until tomorrow!' and not 'good-by!' for any of us."

As Beatrice stood watching the car as it sped down the hill, and waving to the occupants as they looked back at her, she did not know that the driver thought her a rather pathetic, lonely figure, silhouetted against the pale buff of her cottage, the setting sun flooding her with its warm pink light. The subtle sadness of the hour made her pensive as she turned into the house, and, like other mothers, when they feel depression menacing them, she hurried to the nursery, where she knew the children would be undressing for bed. They welcomed her joyfully.

"Oh, mother, what a dandy car that is!" exclaimed Jack. "I was sorry I was in my pajamas so that I couldn't run out and see it, but I watched it from the window. It's got a self-starter, hasn't it?"

"Bless your heart, how do I know?" laughed Beatrice. "I never heard of a self-starter."

Jack looked at her reproachfully. "I don't see," he said, "how you could be in a car all day and not know how it starts."

Beatrice kissed him, still laughing. "You're a regular small masculine darling," she declared. "If you want to know all about a thing—what starts it and what stops it—before you can enjoy it. But we women take our good things just as they come. Yet I know enough about the car to see that it is perfect."

What Jean Thought

"I don't fink," said Jean, turning from the window and going toward her small bed, "eat we car you went in today is near as nice as Mr. Haynes' car."

"Pooh!" scoffed Jack. "That shows all that a girl knows! I tell you that car of Mr. Maynard's brother's cost just about ten times more as that runabout that Dr. Haynes has!"

"I don't care," persisted Jean; "I like Dr. Haynes' car bettee, and I like him better, too."

Her eyes filled with tears, and Beatrice interposed hastily.

"Never mind, darling," she said. "Jack likes one thing and you like another, and you are both right. Now I'll brush your hair, you both into bed and then I'll run down and get my supper."

She stooped in her room to take off her coat, hat and dress and put on a wrapper. She was glad, after all, that John and Helen Robbins were not coming over to-night. She was tired, and her face burned from the hot sun and brisk wind. She coated it well with cold cream, noting regretfully that the end of her nose glowed embeconingly. Then she plastered the cream thickly with powder.

"I know I look like a plaster cast," she said to Mary as she sat down to the supper the maid had prepared for her. But I do not mean to have my nose the color of a scalded tomato if I can help it."

The maid laughed. "Sure, ma'am, you're right. And there's nobody to see you to-night, anyway. The children and me had a nice day, too, and I like the place better'n I thought I would. Mrs. Robbins' waitress is comin' over to see me this evenin', and we're goin' for a bit of a walk. If you don't mind bein' left alone for a while?"

"Of course, I don't," said the mistress. The maid had prepared a nice repast for her, and was in a good humor, so why not indulge her a little?

"I shall sit on the veranda for a little while," she added, "and then go to bed. So take the key of the back door with you."

Uncle Henry Arrives

Later, seated on the veranda, she called out a pleasant "good-night" as Mary and her friend passed on their way to the village ice cream parlor. Left alone, Beatrice tried to fix her mind on the happy events of the day, but felt her thoughts wandering. She was desperately sleepy, and soon got up, determined to go right to bed. She was arrested by the sight of a man crossing her tiny lawn. Even in the faint light she recognized Henry Blanchard. With an inward groan she greeted him as he came up the steps.

"A moment later and you would have found the house closed," she remarked.

"I was so tired I was just going to bed."

She was conscious of a change in his manner, and she felt ill at ease, so, without waiting for a reply, she continued:

"We rode all day, except when we stopped for luncheon, and the trip has made me sleepy. Automobiling always does."

"Yes," assented Blanchard stiffly. "It does tire one, nor, as you know, do I consider it a safe sport. Still, I suppose it has charms for younger persons than I."

"Some very old people enjoy it, too," rejoined Beatrice tactlessly.

The elderly man turned on her suddenly. "Do you consider me a very old man, Beatrice?" he asked, his voice trembling with emotion. "I want that answer here and now. Do you?"

He caught her hand and held it in both of his. The pair were seated now, and when the woman attempted to draw her hand away the man held it fast.

"Why—why—no," she stammered. "not a very old man—much older than I. Perhaps"—with a flash of resentment—"that is the reason you feel you have a right to call me by my first name."

"It is because I love you I call you that," he quavered. His hands were cold, moist and trembling, and the woman's heart smote her with sudden pity and also with a sudden fear.

"Please don't talk like that!" she begged, with more gentleness.

"I must, Beatrice, I must!" he insisted. "These young men all want you, of course, but my claim comes first. I had to tell you this tonight, for a telegram calling me away on a business trip has just come, and I must start early in the morning and stay away a fortnight. And when I get back it may be too late."

Time to Think It Over

Beatrice's mind worked quickly. A fortnight would give her time to consider, to make a positive decision. She was actually afraid to reject finally the old man in his present agitated frame of mind. He might have a "stroke" of some kind, or apoplexy—or something! She looked at him beseechingly.

"Won't you wait until you come back?" she begged.

"No!" he declared. "I want my answer now!"

"Then," she said, still very gently, "it can be but one thing. For until I know my own mind better than I do now, my answer must be 'no.' If," she added hastily, as he started violently, "I had had a little longer to think—it might—it might be—"

The man bent over her eagerly; his hands gripped hers until she winced with pain. "In that case, dear, I'll wait," he whispered. And without another word he was gone.

Left alone again, the woman sprang to her feet. "How could I! How could I!" she shuddered. Then she sighed. "Poor old man!" she whispered.

Pathos and Bathos

"Oh, for the wings of a dove!" sighed the poet.

"Order what you like," rejoined the prosaic person, "but as for me, give me the breast of a chicken."

Reine Davis Says Rain Is Beauty's Best Aid

Miss Reine Davis, a Titian-haired beauty of the stage.

By Margaret Hubbard Ayer

MISS REINE DAVIS blew into an uptown office on one of the rainiest and worst days that November has provided us with.

"I love the rain," she announced to a dripping assembly of rubber-coated and galoshed people, and then she blushed quickly and prettily, because we all looked so glum.

"I have been riding horseback in it all the morning," she said, trying to evoke some enthusiasm. No one said anything, and then she blushed again, this time to a deep crimson.

"Miss Davis, I'd always been interested in people who blush. Do you know that you are blushing, and if you do, why are you? We're not entertaining, though we are dripping," inquired the interviewer, bent on getting information for the countless young girls who ask how to cease from blushing and be at rest from embarrassment.

"I never knew that I blushed until just recently," said Miss Davis, and this time the color that had ebbed to a soft pink flamed back into her cheeks like a Killarney rose.

"I think it was really cruel of the people to call my attention to it, for, while I must have blushed all my life, so long as I don't think about it it really doesn't matter, does it?

"I sympathize now with girls who are teased about blushing by their family and friends, for there's nothing quite so distressing as to feel that you are rushing a signal of embarrassment to your cheeks when you're not embarrassed at all. Of course, the very thought of such a thing opens me, and the only way I can get over the habit is to totally ignore it.

A Great Beauty

"Sometimes people say that one blushes because one is very sensitive, but I don't think that's true. Now I'm sensitive because my hair is red, but I don't blush when I think of that."

And to illustrate the contrariness of womankind, Miss Davis grew scarlet.

"There, I knew I'd do it; oh, what is the use!" she exclaimed.

The red hair she complains of, which is a lovely burnished copper color, goes with a very lovely snow-white skin which is exceedingly thin and transparent. It is a great beauty and probably because it is so delicate, it freckles easily, unless one takes good care of it, as Miss Davis does. For the rest she is a tall and graceful girl, with big blue eyes and a lovely round throat, which shows that white skin in all its purity.

"It's queer how few people love the rain," said Miss Davis, as she settled herself comfortably, threw back her big mackintosh, and looked at us under the rim of a smart little taffeta hat.

"Why, the rain is the best thing in the world for your complexion, and I'd always use rain water if I could; the way they do in fairy tales and beauty books, only, of course, you can't get it unless you go out and let it drip down on your face, straight from Heaven. Even then it isn't very clean, but it's cleaner than the kind that's collected in rain barrels. People wouldn't be so gloomy of they got out and took a good brisk walk every morning, and especially the mornings when it rains," she continued airily, looking at the doleful array of mackintoshes, including mine, that sat before her.

"Everybody knows that the reason the Irish and English girls have such beautiful complexions is because they love to go out in the mist and rain, and it has a wonderful effect on the skin."

Its Benefits

Buckets full of the aforesaid rain were rumbling out of the sky, and a neat little river was flowing from every umbrella in the room, and still the glowing young person continued her dissertation on the benefits of rain water.

"Now the real reason why women hate the rain so much is because they've never quite prepared for it," continued Miss Davis. "Raincoats are clumsy, but what difference does it make? Another thing that few women have is a real rain hat and the right kind of shoes. Walking isn't a popular pastime any more even in good weather, because women will not wear the proper kind of shoes.

"I walk a great deal and I always wear high boots, even in summer, except in the house or for walking very short distances. Pumps are impossible to walk in; they chafe your feet and it's a mental effort to keep them on. If you walk much in pumps you will find that your ankles will get very large. But girls don't seem to care as long as they can put forward a cunning little toe with a big silver buckle.

"I've seen several of those today, would you believe it? And then women wonder why men don't like 'em. It's extraordinary how much common-sense advice you can read about and how little gets accepted."

And with this very wise remark pretty Miss Davis lapsed into silence and the mackintosh brigade slowly filed by her, wishing that the gloomiest day of the year affected them as little as it did this vivid and beautiful girl, who went out into the rain again as gayly as a duck takes to water, and who really likes it.

Household Hints

House drains, if they are properly laid, only require keeping clean. Once a week remove the tops of the gulley pipes, take a bucketful of boiling water, to which has been added a large handful of soda, and pour down very quickly with a rush. This dissolves and breaks away the grease which clings to the sides of the drain pipes.

A room that is warm, with a fire at one end and a blocked chimney at the other end, will become cold and draughty as soon as you light a fire at the other end, and most probably one chimney will smoke when both fires are lighted, although neither chimney smokes when the fire is only lighted in that grate which it serves.

To remove black lead marks from carpets, make a thick paste of fuller's earth and water, to which add a little ammonia, and apply it to the marks. Allow it to dry thoroughly, then brush off carefully with a clean, hard brush. If the first application is not successful repeat the process. The mixture will not harm the carpet.

Written manuscripts and letters which are undecipherable, or partly so, owing to the fading of the ink, may be made readable if the characters are brushed over with a feather or a camel-hair brush dipped in tincture of nutgalls. This easy process will bring out the writing as clear as if newly penned.

A useful hint for heating pies without burning the crust is to put the pie into a deep baking dish filled with hot water and stand on the oven top upon about twenty minutes before wanted, then put in the oven to heat the crust. The pie will be as nice as if just cooked.

Those who have a lot of washing may find clothes pegs often split. If, when new ones are bought, they are put into water and brought to a boil, then pegged on to a stretch of clothes line until dry, they will be found to last a great deal longer than when used straight away.

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

"What's this?" said the editor. "Mr. Longbow is lying at death's door." Make that read 'laying.'"

"What?" exclaimed the reporter in surprise. "That's not correct."

"No," replied the editor; "but it's better to make a grammatical error than offend Longbrow's relatives. His reputation for veracity is notoriously bad."

Son and Heir

A HUMOROUS SHORT STORY

LAST year all that Sallyer could do at the golf club was to brag about his baby, who was too youthful actually to chum with his father's companions. When a baby is at that crumpled, reddish stage which indicates that its age is still reckoning in days all that any father ever does is to brag at a safe distance. He would be exceedingly bored by any closer companionship with his progeny.

This Spring, however, Sallyer felt that Robert, Jr., really was approaching a grown-up stage. He could walk. He could make noises that sounded almost like words. He could smile intelligently. Hence Sallyer felt that Robert, Jr., had developed into a son who was quite a human being and entirely worthy of introduction into intelligent circles.

"Why not let me take the kid out to the club?" Sallyer asked his wife on a recent Saturday afternoon. "I want to show him to the fellows. Oh, of course he'll be good—and I won't stay long. It'll give you a chance to get a little rest, too."

"It's a perfectly crazy idea!" declared Sallyer's wife. "What do they care about babies at a golf club? They want to play golf."

"I guess it won't hurt 'em to look at my son!" declared Sallyer, fatuously. "They're always shooting about their kids. I want to show 'em a real boy."

In His Glory

Sallyer and his son created all the interest that Sallyer had hoped for. They arrived about 2 o'clock, when the verandas were well filled, and there was a rush to see the baby, who was exceedingly spotty in his new Spring clothes. The men shook hands with him gravely, and he bore himself with equal gravity, greatly to his father's delight. When the several women began to coo over him Sallyer withdrew to the company of the men and beamed.

Chief among the enthusiastic feminine admirers of Robert, Jr., was Miss Quigley. Sallyer grinned a bit when he observed her lift the baby upon her knee, for he felt that Miss Quigley was making a grandstand play and was not above getting solid even with the juvenile members of the Sallyer family. It was well known that she had her eye upon Sallyer's brother Bob. Beyond the fact that she could play a disgustingly good game of golf, Sallyer admitted that he couldn't object to Miss Quigley as a sister-in-law, though as a rule it did not do for a woman in a family to outshine the men in any line. She doubtless was waiting for Bob now.

Sallyer turned to greet an acquaintance. Five minutes later he was deep in a discussion of the virtues of a new ball. Ten minutes later he had furiously accepted a challenge to a game to prove his contention. Fifteen minutes later he was teeing off at the first hole with energy and absorption.

It was a hotly contested game. At its finish Sallyer and his opponent found their appetites still unfleshed, so they played another round. It was a glorious afternoon and they idled over the course. "When I can drink in air like this," Sallyer said every little while, "it makes me feel that life is really worth living!"

After he had finished playing Sallyer and a group of men strolled into a clump of apple trees and smoked and then simultaneously sighed and arose, for they must catch the 5:50 train. Beaming, flushed with exercise and general happiness, Sallyer tramped into the clubhouse. As he passed the big living room door shrill, angry yells smote his ear. Something at the back of his brain was disturbed, but not till he had walked straight by a little group in the window did some dim thought put the brakes on Sallyer's feet.

He Forgot

He blinked a moment at the tableau of Miss Quigley with Robert, Jr., in her arms before he comprehended Miss Quigley was flushed, disheveled, awry, angry. Robert, Jr., struggling in her grasp, was furious. An unprejudiced person might have said that at one particularly vicious yell of, Robert, Jr.'s, Miss Quigley shook him.

"Great snakes!" gasped Sallyer as he comprehended. "I forgot—I forgot all about his being here!"

"I should think you had!" Miss Quigley managed to gasp. "He seems a very active child. I never worked so hard in my life as I have since 2 o'clock. And your wife has telephoned five times for you!"

She added this as though rejoiced to know that retribution awaited Sallyer at the other end of the line.

"Say," Sallyer begged. "I'm scared. Come on home with me and help temper the atmosphere when I arrive. I fancy Bob will drop in for dinner, since he isn't out here!"

"Well," said Miss Quigley, "you deserve all you are going to get—but I'm just mad enough at you to go along and see you get it!"

A Dreadful Feat

"ABOUT turn!" "Four fours."

"Stand at ease!" "Easy!"

"Squard, ¿shun!"

The sergeant was bawling out his orders on the barrack square, watching the feet of the line of recruits as they vainly tried to obey his stentorian words of command.

To his amazement, he found that one pair of feet, noticeably on account of their large size, never turned. Still looking at them, he repeated the order:

"About turn!"

All the feet turned except the pair upon which he had his eyes. Rushing up to the owner—a little fellow—he roared him by the shoulder.

"Why don't you turn with the rest?"

"I did," was the reply.

"Nonsense! I watched your feet!" And the sergeant looked at the recruit wrathfully.

"It's the boots they gave me, sir," explained the poor fellow. "They're so large that, when I turn, my feet turn in them!"

SIMPLE RECIPES FOR BEAUTY AND HEALTH

PROPER WAY TO SHAMPOO—In the first place, never wash the hair with soap, as it makes the hair harsh, streaky, brittle and takes away the glossy look. Try shampooing with a teaspoonful of carbonate dissolved in a cup of hot water, rinsing thoroughly with clear water. This shampoo dries very quickly and is used by the best hairdressers to make the hair fluffy and lustrous. The abundant lather cleanses as no other shampoo will and checks dandruff immediately. It is inexpensive and makes shampooing a simple, easy undertaking.

TO REMOVE BLACKHEADS AND WRINKLES.—To get rid of blackheads, premature wrinkles, freckles, large pores and similar facial blemishes, use the following prescribed cream-jelly which can be prepared at home at small cost: Mix one ounce of almonds and two teaspoonfuls of glycerine in one-half pint cold water. Stir and let stand a few hours. This cream-jelly will keep the skin soft, smooth and satiny and when used as a massage-cream cleanses the pores perfectly and will restore the youthful color to a faded, sallow skin.

EASY EYE-REMEDY—Tired, dull, inflamed eyes can be made strong, clear and sparkling by using the following simple lotion: Dissolve one ounce cryston in a pint of cold water and drop a few drops in each eye daily. It is very soothing and strengthening and has enabled many to do away with wearing glasses. For granulated lids and eye troubles generally, the results have been remarkable.

BLOOD HEALTH-TONIC—To tone up the system, restore lost appetite, purify the blood and give new life and strength to a run-down body, there is no better remedy than this old-fashioned, home-made tonic: Dissolve one ounce burdock and one-half ounful sugar in one-half pint alcohol and add one pint hot water. Shake to make a full quart. A tablespoonful taken before each meal will have you up with pure, rich, red blood and give strength and energy to every nerve and body. This fine tonic is a wonderful health-restorer and quickly removes skin eruptions, sallowness and other signs of poor health.

SUPERFUZZY GROWTHS—With a little water mix enough depilatone to cover the hairy surface, apply and after two or three minutes remove, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This depilatone treatment is harmless, unfailing and banishes hair or fuzz without marring or discoloring the skin.

CLEANSE YOUR LIVER AND BOWELS WITH DELICIOUS "SYRUP OF FIGS"

Removes the sour bile, gases and clogged-up waste without gripe or nausea. No headache, indigestion, constipation, biliousness or coated tongue.

Foul breath, coated tongue, dull, throbbing headache, stomach sour and full of gases, indigestion, biliousness and a sallow complexion, mean that your thirty feet of bowels are clogged with waste matter; that these drainage sewers of the body are sluggish, liver stagnant and stomach full of indigestion; that your bile and undigested, fermenting food not properly carried off.

Most of our ills are caused by constipated bowels. We all need a laxative sometimes; nobody can doubt that. The only question is, Which one is the best? and that isn't a question any more. Syrup of Figs, being composed entirely of luscious figs, senna and aromatics, must act in a harmless, gentle and natural way. Syrup of Figs can be constantly used without injury. Its action is the action of fruit—of eating ripe, juicy food—of taking exercise. It is a true and effective liver and bowel cleanser and regulator.

Most folks need physic—they shrink from the taste and after effects. Syrup of Figs is delicious, and, besides, you don't realize you have taken anything until morning, when all the clogged-up waste of the system is gently but thoroughly moved on and out of the bowels without griping or weakness.

Ask your druggist for the full name, "Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna." This is the old reliable and only genuine. Refuse, with contempt, any other Fig Syrup recommended as good. They are imitations, meant to deceive you. Read the label carefully and look for the name California Fig Syrup Company.

"I'M afraid that you only sat at the table in the window, Broadway" she laughed out.

The pictures of the many times he had actually sat as far away from the kitchen in the restaurant she had frequented created in his mind by the girl's words were speedily blotted out by his consciousness of the great—that vast, dear fact—that she had called him "Broadway."

His knees bent until he almost seemed to be kneeling while he drew the big white apron he had thoughtfully purchased from the butcher in the village about him.

"Go ahead and give your orders," he said fervently. "I'll take orders from you for the rest of your life—Josie."

Then he straightened up, proud of having dared to call her Josie. But she did not seem to have noticed it.

"You'll certainly take orders from me now——" she began and stopped.

"Broadway—call me Broadway," eagerly supplemented Jackson.

She finished:

"——Mr. Jones, for I'm going to make you get this dinner as it should be got."

"Why?" again dared Jackson.

A distant smile appeared on the lips of the girl.

"I really am very fond of——the Judge, you know," she said carelessly. "You know he had dyspepsia fearfully last Winter."

"Oh," said Broadway, and he fell frantically to beating eggs with a shaving brush in a small hammered brass vase.

The dinner was got in an orderly course after that.

The girl worked seemingly without effort and Broadway soon, under her friendly spell, had lost the little daring he had summoned. Gradually his mind passed to a consideration of the tasks she had set for him, so that in the end he almost came to believe that he himself had done it all.

Just before the meal—now really dainty—was carried country fashion up into the dining room, Josie's spirits again seemed to have a sudden flight into an upper level. She cast one glance at Broadway that made that youth drop the platter he held and dart toward her. Just as he reached her he came to believe that her look had been one of fear merely. Indeed with one hand she pointed behind her.

"Oh, did you see it? Do you see it?" she exclaimed.

Broadway forgot his purpose and his plan. With real apprehension for her he turned quickly.

"What is it? Where is it?" he asked.

"The ghost of old Tom Jones the Jury," flashed back the girl and was gone above stairs.

PART VI.

The Chops Are Eaten

THE memory of that meal will probably some day live in the annals of the Jones family, of Jonesville, Ct. While that may not have happened as yet, it certainly remained a distinct recollection in the minds of all who ate it. Even Sammy, absorbed in eating and longing for the time to come when he could entertain the company with his bon-ton, felt that there was something unusual in the atmosphere.

The meal began with the chatter and spirits of Clara and Wallace spreading their influence over the little group. But, as it progressed, Josie, as Broadway would have said at an earlier time, took the stage and held it for the balance of the dinner.

Never had the Judge nor Mrs. Spottswood seen the unusually demure, sedate young woman in such wild spirits and a mental poise that trembled at times upon the edge of abandon.

A moment later she would seem sunk in impenetrable gloom, but this would pass speedily, and there would be a return to her former hilarious mood with yet a subtle difference.

Josie's High Spirits

Her play of wit and fancy dazzled not only Broadway, Bob and the Judge, but actually struck dumb Mrs. Spottswood and Clara. The Judge was moved to whisper to his wife:

"If Broadway gets that girl she'll lend him a merry dance. She's got champagne in her temperament. I saw a girl once a little like her in New Britain. But she was drunk."

But the wife could not reply to this confession, it may have been, of the Judge.

To Sammy much of the value of the scene was lost because of the beloved banjo he had insisted upon bringing with him.

Josie had just laughed unsteadily and had remarked: "There's a wealth of meaning in lamb chops, isn't there, Mr. Jones?" and the company, including Broadway, were trying to puzzle out her intent, when the quivering, shrill sounds of a tune played upon the single string of a banjo out of harmony jarred itself on their attention.

Everybody, including Jackson and Sammy turned toward the small boy in real relief, and the musician's little attempt to entertain served to break the spell that had had some influence upon each of the group. Sammy's seriousness and his persistent efforts were thrown into relief by the gay atmosphere which had prevailed for but a moment before.

In His Glory

Sammy finished and held the banjo closely before his ear while he tested the shrillness of another string preparatory to playing upon that one alone, too.

"That wasn't at all bad, Sammy," commended Jackson.

"No, indeed, it was very good," added Wallace.

"Very good," sniffed Sammy. "I should say it was very good. Gosh, I've only been taking lessons for a year and a half. Well, what are you laughing at? Don't you believe me? I'll bet 'Lize' when she was a boy didn't do as good as that. Beethoven used to make up tunes and play them when he was a little boy. Now, I'll play one I made up myself."

The preparatory anonics so jarred upon the ear of Jackson that he said in a kindly manner to the young group of auditors: "Don't tire yourself out, Sammy."

Wishing to be very obliging after the dinner that Broadway had planned and Josie really cooked, Sammy was quick to disclaim any fatigue.

"Oh, no," he said. "I'd have to practice anyway."

Clara, shallower than Josie, who had a mind that embraced all the world, never showed to her small brother much patience. And so now she discouraged his good intentions.

No. 92.—Helen Views Some Antique Furniture That Is to Be Sold at Auction

"THIS might be worth looking up," said Warren, pointing to an auction sale announcement as he threw the newspaper into Helen's lap. "They may have some pretty good stuff there."

"The entire stock of Ernest Wedmere's 'Antique Shop,' consisting of many rare specimens of old English, French and Colonial Furniture, to be sold at auction.

"Mr. Wedmere is retiring from business, and his choice collection of furniture, curios, porcelains, carvings, etc., will be offered without reserve. Sale commences Thursday, November 16, at 11 o'clock. On view at The Van Norden Auction Rooms. Catalogues may be had on application."

"Oh, that does sound interesting," exclaimed Helen as she glanced through the notice. "And I remember the shop, don't you? He had some very good things."

"Yes, passed thing, the other day, a Building Coming Down' sign was up there, this may be a going-out sale, but most of them are fakes!"

"Fakes! How dear!"

"Well, they put goods up at auction, and then protect them. Buy most of it themselves. But you might go around and take a look at the stuff—see what they've got."

Her Ambition

As their new apartment was so much larger than the old one, they had many things still to buy. They both loved old furniture, and Helen had been hunting the antique shops. It was her ambition to some day have their home entirely furnished in antiques.

So the next morning she started out to the auction rooms, where the goods were advertised to be on view.

There was a pile of catalogues on a table by the door. Helen took one, and began looking about with eager interest.

The goods were attractively displayed. The larger pieces of furniture lined the walls, while a number of tables down the middle of the room were laden with interesting old curios, potteries and porcelains. Some old tapestries and rugs and a few paintings hung about.

A number of prospective bidders were already there, examining the collection and making notes in their catalogues.

Helen had paused before a large antique desk with a bookcase above. It was a fine old piece, big and roomy—just the impression, as have most women, that books had long ago overflowed their bookcase, and they had no place to put them.

The number was 380. She turned to her catalogue. "380—Antique Sheraton Mahogany Secretary." She wondered how much it would bring. Helen had never bought anything at auction, but she had the impression, as have most women, that everything should go absurdly cheap.

She marked this item with a brief description on the margin of the catalogue. She would ask Warren to come and see it.

The next piece that claimed her attention was an old-fashioned sewing table. There were two small drawers fitted with quaint wooden partitions for needles and thread, and underneath was a green silk bag. The silk was old and faded, but that only showed its genuineness, and could easily be renewed.

Helen Learns

Two women were examining a sideboard nearby, and Helen could not help but overhear their comments.

"Those handles are new, and I'm sure the claw feet have been put on, but I think the rest of it's genuine."

"Yes, I think that's old," pulling out one of the drawers. "These look like the original locks, but they doctor these things up so you can never feel sure. You don't think it's too long?"

"Let's measure and see," as she drew a tiny tape measure from her handbag. "Five foot eight—that's all right. That space between your dining room doors is just six feet."

This bit of conversation was to Helen most interesting. It showed a knowledge of antique furniture that she did not possess, and it showed, too, the advisability of measuring any desired piece, to see if it would correspond with one's wall space.

There were many other comments equally instructive that Helen overheard as she wandered through the two large rooms, crowded with antiques and reproductions.

One man, whom she knew was a dealer, for she had seen him in his own shop, was going through the goods with the swiftness of an expert, making rapid notes in his catalogue.

As he passed Helen caught a glimpse of figures down the page. Evidently he was marking the limit he would pay for each article. She would have given a great deal to have seen and been able to copy some of those figures.

Their Prices

"Oh, this is one of those Sil Paisley shawls." A young woman was pointing to a shawl that covered one of the tables. Helen had one almost like it, that had belonged to her mother, but she had always heard it called "Brochee."

"I wouldn't pay over five dollars for it," remarked an older woman, who was with her. "Mrs. Edwards got a much better one than that the other day for seven."

Five dollars thought Helen indignantly. She took up a corner of the shawl as the women passed on. It was almost an exact duplicate of her mother's, which she had prized so highly, and had thought was worth at least fifty!

On the same table were some old ruby glass decanters. Helen was admiring these when the two women who had commented on the sideboard came by.

"Reproduction!" as one of them took up a decanter. "It's almost impossible to get any genuine ruby glass now. This isnre ware, too," examining a small incre pitcher, "There's a factory over in Jersey turning these out by the hundreds."

Helen was much impressed. Both the decanter and the little incre pitcher had looked to her to be genuine. But if she could not trust her knowledge of these things, she felt sure that she could detect the reproductions in furniture.

At last, reluctantly, she left the place. There was nothing Helen enjoyed more than wandering about among antiques, and every moment she had spent there had been an intense pleasure.

On the way home in the street car she studied the catalogue and could hardly wait until Warren came home to tell him about it all.

But when he did come he looked tired and irritable, and she decided to wait until after dinner. However, during dinner he brought up the subject himself.

What She Wanted

"Well, did you see that stuff today?"

"Oh, yes, dear, and they've some wonderful things there. Wait, I'll bring you the catalogue."

She got out the catalogue and showed him the things she had marked.

"Oh, if we could only get this," pointing to the item, "380—Antique Sheraton Mahogany Secretary." "The bookcase on top would hold all your books, and the desk part is full of little drawers and pigeonholes, there's some secret drawers, too—it's really an unusual piece."

"Um-m, I don't know about those big pieces. You don't want anything too heavy; it'll dwarf all the other furniture."

"Oh, but Warren, the lines are so good, it doesn't look heavy. Just wait till you see it. And here," pointing to an item on the next page, "I want you to look at this, too—this long mahogany mirror. Just the right length to hang over our sideboard. And, oh, this old sewing table, if it goes cheap, I should love to have that."

"What's this?" asked Warren, pointing to an item farther on. "Antique Mahogany collaret." Did you see that? "

"No, dear, I don't remember."

"Well, if it's all right, if it's a good one, we might take a chance at that. We need a collaret."

"But when can you go to see these things, dear? Could you stop by there in the morning?"

To Shop Alone

"Don't know about that. I've a pretty full day tomorrow."

"But the sale begins the day after," persisted Helen.

"Well, you ought to be able to size up that stuff. You've been looking around antique shops long enough to know the value of the things you want."

"Oh, you mean for me to go to the sale alone?"

"Why not? If you look over the goods beforehand, you ought to be able to buy as well as anybody else. Make up your mind what you want and what you want to pay, and don't bid on anything else. Don't lose your head and get rattled and buy a lot of stuff you don't need, just because it's cheap. That's what most women do at auctions."

Helen had not dreamt that he would want her to buy anything alone, and now she was airbill with excitement and anticipation. She was eager to show him she could buy at auction, and that she could help with discretion and judgment.

All the rest of the evening she was mentally fitting out their apartment with rare old antiques—exceptional pieces—which she felt she could get for "almost nothing." For this is the delusion of auctions.

The sale began Thursday. Never had a two days' wait seemed so long.

Love's Blind Eye.

NEWLY married, the young couple were startling on their honeymoon. Beyond themselves they had no thoughts for anything or anybody, and they sat, so close together in the railway carriage!

By-and-by the train drew up at a wayside station, known to fame as Sawyer Junction.

"Sawyer! Sawyer! Sawyer!" shouted the guard, one most stolen porter as he passed the open window of the carriage containing the honeymoon couple.

The young bridegroom, who had just kissed his new-found nuisance for the six hundred and twenty-first time, rose in his wrath and thrust his head out through the aperture of the window.

"Don't curse if you did!" he snapped indignantly. "We were married this morning!"

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

Light Trading on Exchanges. U. S. Rubber Advances. Coppers Firm.

STATE STREET, Nov. 20.—Trading was quiet and prices generally firm at the opening of the local market today. Old Colony and Mayflower were the only issues in which there was any real activity, and both made a substantial fractional advance. There was no news of any kind to inspire trading, even the usual routine reports from mining properties being conspicuous by their absence. Shortly after 11 o'clock trading became so quiet that neither the New York nor Boston tickers would move for minutes at a time.

New York Opening.

United States Rubber was the most prominent stock at the opening of the New York stock market today, advancing 1¼ to 50, the highest mark this year, has attained in a long period. Mexican Petroleum was another strong issue, gaining 1¼ to 83, and California Petroleum sold up ¾ to 31¼.

There were some recessions at the opening, but after the first few minutes most of the stocks had sold off recovering their loss.

Among the initial declines were: Amalgamated Copper ¾, American Cotton Oil ¼, Anaconda Copper ¼, Bethlehem Steel ¼, Missouri Pacific ¾, Southern Pacific ¼, Westinghouse ¼, United States Steel common ¼, Southern Railway ¼, Southern Pacific, American Locomotive, Reading and Ohio Copper weren arranged on a fractional basis of ¼ to ½ from the close yesterday. Atchison ¾, American Beet Sugar ¾, Canadian Pacific ¾, Pitts. & Ft. Wayne ½, Northern Ore certificates ⅝ and Woolworth ¼. The New York curb market was steady.

Brooklyn Rapid Transit.

A prominent director in Brooklyn Rapid Transit says that the failure of the directors to increase the dividend to a 6 per cent. basis was not due to lack of earnings to justify such, but simply a matter of conservatism, and with the present condition of excellent earnings it is quite probable that the directors will place the stock on a 6 per cent. basis not later than February, 1913.

There is a steady absorption of Brooklyn Rapid Transit for investment, with a present list of stockholders larger than at any previous time in the company's history. The stock appears to have largely retired from the speculative arena.

Railway Car Shortage.

It is only six weeks back that predictions were freely made that the shortage of freight cars on the railroads of this country and Canada would, by the middle of November, amount to more than 200,000 cars, but present indications make it seem doubtful if the shortage will at any time this year reach 150,000 cars.

According to a bulletin issued by the American Railway Association, the shortage on November 1 totalled 51,250 cars, an increase of but 1,278 cars in the preceding two weeks. The situation is not at all serious that is, there has not been any congestion of consequence as yet, nor is there likely to be, despite the pessimistic statement put out by certain railway officials early in the Fall.

Foreign Financial News.

London copper warrants were firm and 5s. 6d. higher at the opening, at £78 1-10 for spot and £78⅝ for futures.

The British House of Commons adopted a new financial resolution of home rule bill to replace resolution defeated November 11.

The London securities markets displayed firmness today and gilt edged investments and foreign rails made a good showing. American railway shares were steadier and Canadian Pacific responded to the official announcement of the authorization of $60,000,000 new capital to be issued in January. Foreigners and mines held firmly. De Beers advanced ⅝ to £1 1-16 and Rio Tintos advanced ¼ to 76.

The Berlin Bourse was closed on account of a holiday.

CITY PAYROLL TO BE LARGER STILL, MAYOR DECLARES

Mayor Fitzgerald was undisturbed today over comment on the $800,000 increase this year in the city's payroll. The increase will grow much larger, he declared.

He plans to increase the pay of hundreds of more city employes, among these city laborers, who he is determined to pay $2.50 a day instead of $2.25. Boston should set an example in good wages in order that the public may force contractors and private individuals to follow suit, the Mayor said.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 20.—Carmi Thompson, secretary to President Taft, today was appointed treasurer of the United States to succeed Lee McClung. Time to End Turkey Trottin Revival on Way, Says Chut

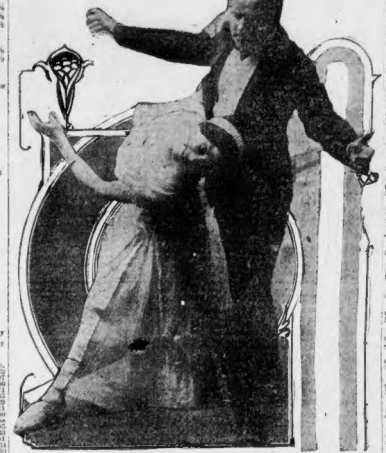
AMELIA BURNHAM AND PAUL J. CHUTE



Better Days for Dancing Coming, Says "Most Graceful Man in America."

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

"It's about time we did away with trots and wriggles and commenced paying some attention to real grace and art in dancing," declared Paul Jones Chute, whom La Lois Fuller has declared the most graceful man in America.

"The Turkey Trot, the Chicken Flip and all the rest of that class of dances are abominable and the truth of the matter is they are not danced by our most select society people. The fine old waltz, the stately minuet and new ones which combine grace with art will soon give place to all this barbarous bunny hugging and turkey trotting.

"The great craze of dancing which has swept over the country with the coming of the Russians has awakened many an artistic mind to the wonders of this glorious exercise, and today fancy dancing is the all-absorbing fad with society. There never was better entertainment than there was a more wonderful stimulant. This fact has at last been recognized by society women and girls, who find that is is the most delightful of exercises and at the same time serves to bring them fit for their social demands and also gives them a delightful social opportunity.

"Dancing is the best beauty secret or beauty-creator known. It keeps the figure slender and graceful and is the best of health producers, and, as everybody knows, health is the first and most important requirement for beauty."

"Well, what is the end and aim of dancing?" I interrupted. "The end? Is almost shouted at me, "there is no end, but the aim, why, the aim with some is to make the dance as beautiful as possible and with others to make themselves as beautiful as possible, though the means of dancing. By dancing—by real dancing, I mean dancing with a knowledge of what dancing really is and not just this ridiculous hopping around to music. We then drifted on stage dancing and this is what Mr.Chute who knows stage dancing from A to Z has to say about it.

"American dancers who dance intelligently and with any real knowledge of what they are doing are few and far between.

"But those who can dance are not given a chance. It's the foreign dancers who are brought in here and who, in many instances, are not one half as good as the American product who are going away with all the American dollars which should be given our own dancers. Let the managers give the American girls and boys a chance to dance. Let them have a chance preparing for the stage under good teachers, and their people are spending good American money to fit them for the stage.

"I can't understand all this rage of foreigners. We only get a very few of the best of them anyway, and certainly their worst or their mediocre is not as good as our best. Real dancing takes years to accomplish.

"Among our best women dancers are Adelaide and Bessie Clayton. Adelaide as we all know is a miss of a woman who has danced since childhood and has studied technique until now her art is as near perfection as possible. I doubt if there is any dancer on the other side who can compare with Miss Clayton in her style of dancing.

"La Belle Dazie, an American girl despite her name, has made a reputation as a dancer. She would have been quite as good as Adelaide or Bessie Clayton had she studied rather the acrobatic or the acrobatico, but she has tried to combine both, and therefore her work lacks the finesse necessary for individuality.

"Lois Fuller don fame as a dancer, but she never could dance. She was, however, a great student of the art and has assisted many to fame, among them Isadora Duncan and Maud Allen.

"Of the men dancers of note I am sorry to say there are few, perhaps because dancing doesn't appeal to men as it does to women, and perhaps because they are ashamed of the long period of training. Joseph Smith is a good example of the artistic ballet school. Donald Brian is a good ball room dancer, that is, he waltzes very nicely; he also does a neat clog. Martin Brown is another good ballroom dancer.

"Harry Pilcer is a dancer of the grotesque type, quite one of the best we have.

"I am sorry, however, that we can call Mr. Pilcer an American.

"We can also turn to another style of dancing which embraces those dainty bits of Dresden China, the Hengler sisters and the amusing McCoy girls, all dancers of a style now nearly extinct, step dancers of the old school taught them by their fathers.

"But dancing, which for a time was a lost art, is rapidly being revived."

The Public Can Break the Power of the New Haven Monopoly—How Soon Does the Public Propose to Act?

While Mr. Morgan and Mr. Mellen continue to hatch new schemes to advance and to defend their railroad monopoly in New England, THE TOLL OF DEATHS AND MORTAL INJURIES IN RAILROAD WRECKS CONTINUES to be paid as the price of their NEGLECT to attend to the legitimate business of operating a railroad.

These accidents are happening upon the railroad WHOSE BAD CROSSOVER SYSTEM, BROKEN RAILS AND ROTTEN TIES Vice-President Byrnes, in a letter to the AMERICAN, recently declared to be equal to any railroad in the world. This is the railroad which was going to teach the communities served by the Boston & Maine how a railroad ought to be operated.

The Wall street gentlemen under whose control the stock of the Boston & Maine has fallen FROM ONE HUNDRED AND NINETY TO A LITTLE OVER NINETY DOLLARS A SHARE, and whose service has become so bad that even the business men whose business depends so much upon a railroad have dared to brave its resentment and cry out in protest against its service, are, indeed, showing Massachusetts and northern New England how THEY run a railroad.

But before they were permitted to take control of the Boston & Maine they failed to specify that the kind of railroading which they proposed to exhibit to the people of this State and Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont was a specimen of WALL STREET RAILROADING for the benefit of insiders and of profits on stock and bond issues.

We are PAYING IN LIVES AND HEALTH AND BUSINESS the price of monopoly.

When we violate the laws of Nature, she always exacts a penalty. When we destroy her checks and balances, we take away the protection which her wise system of compensation has given us. She has given us a greed for gain as a motive to effort and struggle, but she has balanced it with the law of competition which harnesses individual selfishness and makes it serve the public.

When we DESTROY COMPETITION and PERMIT A MONOPOLY, we destroy the laws of compensation and allow selfishness to run amuck. The unfortunate results may be seen in the evidence given before the Interstate Commerce Commission by the business men whose interests are being JEOPARDIZED BY MISERABLE RAILROAD SERVICE and in the TOMBSTONES which mark the graves of the VICTIMS OF THE NEGLIGENCE AND INHERENT INCOMPETENCY of monopoly.

When does the New Haven Railroad propose to answer the question which Interstate Commerce Commissioner McChord asked at an investigation of a recent wreck:

> "WHEN ARE YOU GOING TO QUIT THINKING AND TALKING AND DO SOMETHING? YOUR ROAD HAS KILLED TWENTY OR TWENTY-FIVE PERSONS AND INJURED ONE HUNDRED MORE IN THREE CROSSOVER ACCIDENTS, ALMOST IDENTICAL."

When does the New Haven propose to stop paying extravagant prices for enterprises NOT WITHIN THE SCOPE OF LEGITIMATE RAILROAD BUSINESS, which so impoverish the railroad that it cannot earn its dividends and cannot spend the money that is necessary to maintain its service and maintain its tracks?

More important still, WHEN DOES THE PUBLIC PROPOSE TO COMPEL THE NEW HAVEN TO ANSWER COMMISSIONER McCHORD'S QUESTION?

When does the public propose to STOP THE NEW HAVEN'S RECKLESS EXTRAVAGANCE in quest of a baleful monopoly? When does the public propose to BREAK UP THIS MONOPOLY by separating from the New Haven the control of the Boston & Maine Railroad?

THE DREAM KING

By Earl Baldwin Thomas

So he's gone into his kingdom
Where the fairies loll at ease,
Where his broken toys are waiting
In the Ship o' Seven Seas.
What surprises will awaken
In his blue-eyed baby stare,
When he finds the great good fairy
Whom he called his "muvver," there.
Yes, the little king was sleeping,
As I held his hand last night;
But I whispered to his spirit
Just one message: ah, so bright!
And I kissed his royal forehead,
As I clasped my hands and prayed,
"Tell the good, kind fairy darling,
Of the castles that we made."

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

POWERS AND BALKAN WAR
Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—I have noticed several articles regarding the Balkan situation to the effect that the Powers should intervene so the Balkan States would not seize Constantinople and that the States would not be allowed to keep that part of Turkey which they get through conquest.

Everybody knows that Turkey should have been driven back to Asia Minor years ago, but the Powers delayed, and in the meantime thousands of their Christian brothers have been massacred. What would be nobler than if the Powers would keep their hands off and watch what have always been spoken of as the little Balkan States form themselves into one of the finest empires in the world? They can do it.

They are to a certain extent blood relations, and have produced some of the finest statesmen, and are proving that their warriors are to be admired the world over. It would be no more than just if every liberty loving man who could would offer his sword to the future Balkan empire to help them hold that which is rightfully theirs.

One Hundred Ways to Earn Money at Home

HAVE you ever thought of letting your hobbies work for you? That camera you are so fond of—it does cost a lot to keep up, doesn't it? Suppose it brought you a profit twice as great? Here is what Mrs. Randale of No. 1035 Washington street, Lynn, Mass., did with her camera.

"As I own a camera 5¼ x 4¼ (which is a fairly good size picture), I am very fond of taking snapshots. Several of my friends who have a baby, or a cat or dog of whom they would like some little picture to remember them by, and yet do not care to pay a photographer a big price, come and ask me to take it, for which I charge ten cents apiece, finished. Very often grown people will want pictures of themselves in funny clothes or pose, just in fun. I double what I make on each picture, and they rarely take fewer than half a dozen.

And G. C. W. R. of No. 18 Granite street, Dorchester, Mass., tells this story:

Quite without seeking it, money came to me. When a girl and after marriage I always had a camera, a good one, too, which I used frequently and successfully. I took a vast number of dear pictures of my little sons and daughters, which were much admired by all my friends. A dozen of them wanted me to take pictures of their children, and I enjoyed it immensely. They did not hesitate to pay me a dollar for six, which means a profit of 25 per cent., and they would want me to take several different styles, which of course cost more. Mothers always love pictures, and I would take styles a real photographer would not attempt—baby asleep, in his bath, playing in his sand pile, etc. I made a lot of pin money this way, and besides I gratified many mothers who prize the little snapshots which I took.

Have you a camera? Then a word to the wise is sufficient.

One dollar will be paid for every letter contributed by Boston AMERICAN readers, and used, in the AMERICAN, containing ideas helpful to those WOMEN WHO WISH TO EARN MONEY AT HOME. Wilson's Election Proves Suffrage Theory

By DOROTHY DIX

As the shouting and tumult which followed the election die away there stand forth three points that are particularly interesting as they affect women.

First and foremost, four more States—Michigan, Kansas, Oregon and Arizona—have joined the honorable procession that has granted political freedom to its women.

Second, although Colonel Roosevelt came out in favor of woman suffrage, and the Progressive party was the only one that inserted a woman suffrage plank in its platform, the Bull Moosers did not carry a single State in which women were voting.

This one fact—that women did not stampede in a body to the Progressive party—is the best suffrage argument that has ever been advanced. It shows that women can keep their heads under the stress of great temptation, and refutes the often expressed fear that they would be fanatics in politics, guided solely by their emotions and prejudices.

And I say this without intending any disparagement whatever to the Progressive party, which many women supported just as conscientiously and intelligently as they did either the Democratic or Republican party.

But in considering the high patriotism and unselfishness of the women who voted for and worked for the Democratic and Republican parties, which offered them nothing, instead of the Progressive party, which promised them their heart's desire, simply because they believed in the Democratic or Republican doctrine rather than the Progressive doctrine, think of this:

For sixty years and more—longer than the Children of Israel wandered hopelessly in the wilderness—we women who believe that taxation without representation is tyranny, and that all just government rests upon the consent of the governed, have been battering upon the doors of the great political parties, begging to be let in, if only we might have the humblest seat, below the salt, at our father's table. And year after year the door has been barred against us, and we have been turned away with jeers and ridicule.

Nobody knows the toil and blood of our striving, the bitterness of our defeat; of how, time and again, our hearts have fainted with despair; of how often, when we saw our leaders fall and die by the wayside, it has seemed that we were fighting for a lost cause. Sixty years and more of baffled effort, and then, one party—the Progressive party—opens the door and leads us in, an honored and invited guest; one Presidential candidate, after having long turned a deaf ear to our entreaties, at last claims, like Paul of Tarsus, to have been a great light and been converted.

One would have thought that women would have been drunk with the joy of this partial victory, and that with one accord they would have rushed, pell mell, to enroll themselves under the Bull Moose standard. To their everlasting honor this has not happened. Women put their patriotism before their profit, their love of their country before good to the cause that is nearest and dearest to the their hearts, and tried to do what they believed to be the best for the United States, even though it might not have been best for suffrage. They knew that they had nothing to hope for from Mr. Taft, and little to expect from Mr. Wilson, and yet because they believed in the Democratic or Republican doctrine they split along those lines. If men ever gave a finer example of sanity and appreciation of the sanctity of the ballot under tempting conditions to become selfishly partisan, I don't know of it.

The third point of interest to women in the election is that it affords them a visible illustration of the different political status of women with the ballot and women without the ballot.

Heretofore, so far as a presidential campaign has been concerned, women have cut just about as much real figure in politics as a snowflake is supposed to cut in the region of perpetual Bumper. Campaign orators were content to throw them a few bouquets of compliments, and to say something nice and flattering about women using their great silent influence in politics. And that ended it.

But with the women voting in six States and holding the balance of power, and with women about to vote in many other States and keenly interested everywhere in politics, there was no talk about women's silent influence. All three of the big parties urged women to use their voices in their behalf, and to roll up their sleeves and help with the actual political work.

Women without the ballot was a cipher that no one thought of considering. Woman with the ballot is a mighty power that has to be reckoned with and conciliated. The granting of the franchise to women in Michigan and Kansas and Arizona and Oregon is the beginning of the end of the long fight women have made for political freedom.

Other States will follow fast, and by the time the next Presidential election comes around there will not even be any discussion of the advisability of inserting a woman's suffrage plank in the platform, nor will there be any Presidential candidate who skulks behind the assertion that he doesn't know where he stands in regard to giving woman the ballot.

The knowledge that millions of women vote, and that they hold the balance of power in any closely contested election, will be powerfully illuminating to the understanding of politicians.

Women have borne themselves well in this campaign, and the moral victory they have won over popular prejudice by their high-minded attitude in politics is no less a matter of congratulation than that there are four more stars in the suffrage flag.
